'Big Three' Arrange Parley on Cold War

House GOP May Ask Ban On Refilling U.S. Jobs

Policy Unit Discusses Plan to Put Rider on Appropriation Bill; May Decide Friday

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House Republican leaders last night hinted they may attempt to tie a ban on refilling of Government vacancies to the 29-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill.

The House GOP policy committee yesterday discussed such a move, but put off a decision until Friday.

Representative John Taber (N. Y.), ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, said it is entirely possible he may offer the motion when the House goes to work on the big single-package bill.

Taber estimated a "nonfilling of vacancies" policy applied to the bulk of Federal personnel would save from one and one-quarter to one and one-half billion dollars in the next fiscal year, and reduce Government employment by 20 percent.

He conceded some exemption would have to be written into the motion, to permit filling of supervisory posts by promotion and to remove top policy-making positions from the ban.

In addition he said some special types of activities of the Veterans' Administration and a limited number of other agencies, as well as all military personnel, might be relieved of the restriction.

The GOP move was aimed at complaints of "overstaffing" in Government agencies featured in last week's report of the Appropriations Committee.

Prior to yesterday's party policy huddle, some Republicans had strongly urged a flat, across-the-board cut in Federal employes as the key GOP economy motion.

Taber, however, opposed such a move.

"You can't do it that way," he told newsmen. "The committee has cut some agencies deeply, but not hurt others a bit. A horizontal cut would continue that inequality. You've got to do it by not filling vacancies."

Ever since the committee reported the first omnibus bill in recent history, paring one billion dollars from Mr. Truman's spending estimates, Republicans have been trying to agree on a way to cut it more.

A large number of economy-minded Democrats have indicated they will support a further cut, provided the GOP motion is "nonpolitical."

With that in mind, Republicans conceded they are moving cautiously in an effort to pick up votes on the Democratic side.

"Actually, there's still about three and one-half billion dollars of fat in that bill," Taber told newsmen. "But if I can make a motion that will save one billion dollars, and will pass the House, I'd rather do it than try to save three and one-half billion and lose."

Deal With Danes On Bases Denied By U. S., Britain

Moscow, March 28 (AP).—Pravda charged today that Britain and America have promised to give part of German Schleswig to Denmark in return for war bases.

"Thus, Schleswig is clearly destined to share the fate of the Saar," said the editorial, "which already has been factually annexed by France with the blessing of Wall Street."

(A British source described the report as "complete nonsense." In Washington the State Department dismissed it as "a complete phony.")

There's an eating place in town where the deluxe meal costs a quarter and the economy meal only 20 cents.

The catch is that you have to be a high school student to eat at this place.

Five hundred students, about half the enrollment of McKinley High School, yesterday took advantage of the food bargain offered in their school cafeteria.

The menu for the deluxe lunch was a slice of roast beef, a generous helping of buttered beets,

Jury-Fixing Attempt Laid To Caldwell

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Night club proprietor Bennie C. Caldwell was arrested and released under $10,000 bond yesterday, charged with tampering with the jury that convicted William (Snags) Lewis and two other gamblers November 26.

Caldwell was indicted earlier in the day and arrested by three deputy United States marshals at his home, 1118 Girard st. nw.

The four-count indictment charges that Caldwell promised money to one juror and caused money to be promised another for a not-guilty verdict. Two other counts charge that Caldwell promised money to a member of the jury panel, but not a Lewis juror, to obtain information "as to the feelings and opinions" of the Lewis jurors.

Caldwell faces maximum penalties, if convicted, of 14 years in prison plus fines of $6500. He operates the Club Ball, 1901 14th st. nw.

The indictment climaxes a two-month investigation by the FBI, but Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz said yesterday the investigation was continuing.

In almost daily attendance at the 17-day Lewis trial, Caldwell appeared before the grand jury probing the fix attempt on three separate occasions February 10, each time for less than 30 seconds.

At that time, Caldwell told reporters that Lewis, alleged head of a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate here, "used to come into my place, but that's all. I got nothing to hide." He

8 Promotions Announced By Barrett

Inspectors Arthur E. Miller and Walter T. Storm will become assistant police superintendents, it was announced yesterday.

Along with these promotions were announced the following advances in rank, all effective Saturday:

John E. Fondahl, captain to inspector; Albert B. Clark, lieutenant to captain; Lewis B. Peters and Alexander J. Douglass, jr., sergeants to lieutenants, and Boyd T. Willard and Milton C. Reed, corporals to sergeants.

Several transfers were announced by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, in connection with the promotions.

Barrett also announced reactivation of the Washington Police Academy, discontinued nearly three years ago.

In brief, this will be the new

ECA Plans Funds To Combat Berlin Unemployment

Berlin, March 28 (NYHT).—In an attempt to curtail unemployment and put West Berlin on its feet, the Economic Cooperation Administration decided today to inject at least 330 million marks, roughly $82,500,000, into the depressed economy of this city.

Eighty million marks will be made available during the next four months for an extensive public works project which will give jobs immediately to about 52,000 workers.

Takoma Elects Beville Mayor; 3 New Councilmen Named

Ross H. Beville was elected mayor of Takoma Park, Md., yesterday over John F. Sidell, 774 to 630, in an election in which fewer than one-third of the voters went to the polls.

Beville

Incumbent Mayor John C. Post did not seek reelection.

In an election which saw 1434 ballots cast, Walter H. McClenon, J. H. Nies, Lawrence A. Oosterhous and H. Brooks Perring were reelected to the city council.

Newly elected members of the council were Charles H. Klinck, James B. Parkhill and Ray H. Eccleston. Two incumbent Councilmen, Herman C. Heffner and John T. Parkerson, did not run, and a third, Beville, was a mayoralty candidate.

In addition to Sidell, the only candidates eliminated in the election were council hopefuls William F. Fischer and Mrs. Gratia B. Woods.

Fischer lost out in a contest with McClenon and Perring in which two council seats were at stake. The results: McClenon, 936; Perring, 785; Fischer, 680.

Mrs. Woods was defeated in a similar race with Klinck and Parkhill. The vote was: Parkhill, 910; Klinck, 884; Mrs. Woods, 438.

Elected without opposition were Nies, 1036; Eccleston, 1029; Oosterhous, 1018.

In a close vote, voters defeated, 299 to 291, a referendum allowing the mayor $600 a year and councilmen $300 in lieu of expenses.

Steinhardt, Four Others Die in Crash

Ramsayville, Ontario, March 28 (AP).—American Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt and four other men died today in the explosion and crash of a United States Embassy plane which fell from a sunlit sky.

Apparently they chose to take their chances with the flaming two-engine aircraft instead of trying low-level parachute jumps.

The lone survivor, who did jump, said the pilot, Capt. Thomas G. Archibald, struggled to keep the doomed C-47 high enough to give those aboard time to jump. Archibald was among those killed.

Body Pulled From Wreckage

The body of Steinhardt was one of two dragged from the wreckage by rescuers. Tattered bits of his clothing were still smoldering. He had on a parachute harness. Two other bodies were found 100 feet from the main part of the shattered wreckage.

Killed with Mr. Steinhardt were:

Alan C. Harrington, 20, son of Julian Harrington, the United States Minister in Ottawa.

Captain Archibald, 34, of Union Springs, Ala., pilot of the plane and assistant air attache.

Lieut. Col. Wayne F. Trueblood, 35, Kansas City, Kans., attached to the RCAF as an exchange officer.

Lieut. Marcel (Mark) Belanger, 29, of New Bedford, Mass., former air attache and now an exchange officer with the RCAF.

Harrington was returning to school in Virginia after a holiday in Ottawa with his parents.

Eyewitnesses said the flaming plane broke apart with an explosion like dynamite and scattered itself across the snow and mud of a farmer's field. Both wings were sheared off.

Survivor Tells Story

The explosion aboard the aircraft and the fact the accident occurred during good flying weather touched off rumors that the plane may have been sabotaged. The Royal Canadian Air Force, which launched an investigation at the request of the United States Embassy, said there was no indication of any such thing.

Investigators at the scene also threw down the sabotage rumors. They said it was entirely possible that the plane exploded just before it crashed but explained that such a blast probably occurred from fire in the engine touching off wing gasoline tanks.

Master Sergt. Gwynne A. Long, 35, of Vannoy, N. C., parachuted from the stricken plane at 700 feet. Long, a U. S. Air Force crew chief, was the only one who got out of the accident alive.

He gave a vivid description of the crash to persons at the scene and later by telephone to State

Truman Holds Loyalty Files From Inquiry

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday told the Senate he would not make available to it the loyalty files on the persons charged by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), with pro-Communist leanings.

At the same time, however, he instructed the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board to make an immediate review of all McCarthy's 90-odd cases and report their findings to him.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating McCarthy's charges, thereupon promptly issued subpenas for the files in question. But this act was strictly a formality.

Had No Alternative

For Tydings made clear in a press conference that he had no alternative, under a Senate resolution authorizing his investigation. He tried to get the files by methods short of subpenas, and failed. Now he must follow the explicit instructions of the resolution.

He stated his own view, however, that he thought the President's decision was a wise one.

The subpenas were sent to the three places where McCarthy said the pertinent data rests—the FBI, the State Department, and the Loyalty Review Board.

But the subpenas will not be obeyed and will end at Mr. Truman's desk. He issued instructions in March 1948 that all such subpenas were to be politely declined, and the subpenas referred to him.

For purposes of the immediate investigation of McCarthy's charges, yesterday's decision ends the question of availability of the files.

Will Reject Subpenas

The President will obviously refuse to obey the subpenas and then Congress may or may not choose to fight the matter through the courts. That would take a matter of two or three years. And heretofore, in test cases running over 150 years, the courts have always sustained the President's right to withhold documents from the Congress.

The President's decision was communicated from his winter vacation spot, in Key West, Fla., in a 1000-word letter to Tydings.

The President sent a copy of that letter to Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, with instructions to fall to at once on the work of reviewing McCarthy's cases, including those of individuals that the board may previously have reviewed.

The President did not say whether he would turn over the report he gets from Richardson to Tydings' subcommittee. He told Tydings only, "Upon receipt of

At School for Enumerators

Excitement, Curiosity Inspire 792 District Census Takers

(Pictures on Page 3.)

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

As Mrs. Pearle Smith Wilson, 56, of Route 1, Berwyn, Md., who took census in 1920 and 1930 and will do it again this year, said:

"I just couldn't pass this one up. You meet so many nice people!"

It was this attitude of happy excitement which filled the air yesterday as 792 Washington census-takers started four days of schooling for E (for Enumeration) Day Saturday and a practice-run Thursday for the 1950 Census, biggest in the Nation's history.

The excitement was leavened, however, with a certain amount of stage fright.

"I have been watching wrestling on television," one handsome young housewife pointedly described her own self-education for census enumeration.

This, she explained, was just in case she should meet some reluctant customers.

But for the most part the enumerators who gathered yesterday in the classrooms at 24th st. and Oklahoma ave. ne. were looking forward to the experience of meeting new—and nice—people.

Who are the enumerators?

They're housewives, college students, retired people, people now unemployed. They range from 21 to 60 years. About half women.

Why do they want to be enurators?

James A. Holt, 48, of 207 Audrey la. se., a retired Coast Guardsman: "It's something to occupy my mind"

John Giacofci, 27, of 1112 17th st. se., a GI student at the National Academy of Broadcasting. "It's a good way of picking up some extra money."

This will work out to about $1 an hour, it's estimated, $80 or so for the April 1 to 15 job.

But the dominant thought was of an unparalleled personal experience—the 250 strange doorbells each will ring, the 250 new people each will talk to.

"I'm not scared," said Mrs. Dan Neighbors, 26, a housewife of Kent Village, Hyattsville, Md. "I just don't know what it'll be like."

A prize assignment was in store for Mrs. Truman Keesey, 27, of 23 Boston ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Keesey will enumerate the two blocks on Pennsylvania avenue from Jackson place to 18th st., including Blair House.

She doesn't know exactly when she'll see President Truman, who's in Key West right now.

But she expects to march right into Blair House and ask him, among other things: "How much, Mr. President, is your income?"

Mrs. Keesey's husband, by the way, is not named after the President—it's a family name. The Keesey's 2-year-old son is also named Truman.

The enumerators got an intensive course yesterday in getting information from people they don't know.

"Be courteous," they were told, ". . . be very careful about personal appearance—people have a habit of looking out their windows to see who's calling before answering . . ."

Schools were under way in the surrounding area, too, getting ready for the big push Saturday.

In the Alexandria district, 281 enumerators will cover Alexandria, Arlington, Falls Church and the counties of Fairfax, Loudon and Prince William. There'll be trial runs Thursday and Friday.

Some 100 enumerators will do the job in Montgomery County, with a trial run set for Friday.

Prince Georges County enumerators, totalling 105, started school yesterday, except for two rural groups that started Monday. Trial runs will be held Thursday and Friday.

House Votes To Cut Fund In ECA Bill

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

By a razor-edge vote of 165 to 163, the House lopped 250 million dollars yesterday from the funds to be authorized for the third year of the Marshall Plan.

An almost unanimous Republican Party had the support of about 20 Southern Democrats in the teller vote which, if sustained, would reduce European recovery funds by about 8½ percent.

The last two who marched up the aisle for the cut, and whose votes swung the decision, were Representatives John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) and Vito Marcantonio (A.L.P., N. Y.), bitter opponents on almost every issue before the House.

A previous attempt to slash 500 million dollars from the Marshall Plan met defeat, but by a margin so narrow that it threw a scare into Administration forces. The vote on this proposal was 137 for and 152 against.

Billion Cut Beaten

The only comfort for the Administration in these proceedings was the defeat of the plan of Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio), to knock out a billion dollars of cash and substitute an equivalent amount of farm surpluses held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Instead of the Vorys plan, which had the backing of the Foreign Affairs Committee, the House voted 178 to 87 for an amendment restoring 750 million dollars in cash and leaving the Economic Cooperation Administration free to buy this amount of surplus supplies either in the open market or through the CCC.

This amendment had the joint support of Representatives James G. Fulton (R., Pa.), a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.), chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and had the strong indorsement of the major farm organizations.

Other Amendments Ready

Other amendments are in prospect today, including one by Representative Omar Burleson (D., Tex.) requiring ECA to buy 750 million dollars' worth of its farm products in the United States or its territories and possessions.

From the temper of the House yesterday, funds for Korea, for Arab refugees and for the Point Four technical aid program are likely to be cut at least as sharply as the Marshall Plan authorization.

There was only one faint possibility that the 250-million-dollar cut could be restored before the eventual conference with the Senate, assuming that the Senate votes the entire $2,950,000,000 for the Democrat Dinner At $100 a Plate Escapes U. S. Tax

There will be no Federal tax on the Democrats' Jefferson-Jackson Day $100-a-plate dinner here, the Internal Revenue Bureau has ruled. The decision apparently applies to other Jefferson-Jackson Day affairs held over the country.

Somewhat in contrast, the Republicans paid 20 percent on the admissions portion of the receipts from their Lincoln Day $1 box supper.

The Democrats did not call any of their take an admission fee and the Internal Revenue Bureau agreed that the admissions levy was not applicable.

Atlantic Pact Chiefs Adopt Defense Plan

The Hague, March 28 (AP).—Chiefs of staff of the 12-nation North Atlantic Alliance fitted together the pieces of a master defense plan at heavily guarded Juliana Barracks, Dutch army headquarters, here today.

A communique said they had adopted unanimously an integrated plan which "emphasizes the responsibilities assumed by each nation to participate with the maximum resources it can provide."

The plan is believed to chart a course of cooperation for the next five years. It will be submitted to a meeting of Defense Ministers here Saturday.

Gen. Omar Bradley of the United States presided.

The plan, it is believed, assigns specific tasks to each nation, such as strategic bombing to the United States, short-range bombing and interception to Britain and France, naval operations to the United States, Britain and other naval powers, and land defense to France and other specified countries.

Finance Ministers of the alliance meet in London Wednesday to consider how the cost of the plan may be defrayed. Some military sources said an effort should be made to see that the members set aside about the same percentage of their budgets for defense purposes. This percentage now varies widely.

Door-to-Door Fast Time Poll To Be Conducted

The District daylight saving time referendum will be a door-to-door canvass conducted by residents and tabulated by police. It may start this week, it was announced yesterday.

Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, said the Commissioners approved a voting procedure suggested by Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett in place of the proposal that his men conduct the poll.

Under the plan outlined by Stofberg, 200,000 instead of 100,000 ballots will be printed and distributed to police precincts.

Beat policemen will select a resident in each block—about 5000 according to District Surveyor F. F. Healey—to distribute ballots to residents of his block. When returned by the block captains, the ballots will be tabulated by precinct policemen, Stofberg said, and the results forwarded to the Commissioners.

Joseph H. MacQuilliam, chief of the District's Division of Printing and Publications, said his office could finish printing the ballots and deliver them to Major Barrett today. Police are organizing their precincts, Stofberg said. No definite starting date has been set.

14th Bridge Traffic Snarled By 'Suicide Leap' That Wasn't

The Metropolitan Police Department went all out last night on an erroneous report that caused dizzy complications.

Things started when Motorcycle Policeman Phalam Jordan put two "facts" together: he'd seen a midget automobile parked without an occupant in the middle of the 14th St. Bridge; he had been told by an unidentified bystander (who had better remain unidentified) that a man had jumped from the bridge.

Jordan called headquarters. And headquarters rallied. It sent to the scene—

The night police inspector, a homicide car, two Park Police cars, two harbor patrol boats, two scout cars, and two motorcycle patrolmen to handle traffic.

This gathering of police, plus the flashing of searchlights and the activity of the boats, drew quite a crowd.

The police cars and the deserted midget auto messed up traffic so thoroughly that even the inspector couldn't break through. He never got closer than the Jefferson Memorial.

One man did make it, Norman Doerner, 21, student at Pennsylvania State College.

Gasoline can in hand, he approached and asked: "What's going on?"

Doerner's reaction on learning that a man in a midget car had "committed suicide" is not reported.

It was Doerner's car. When he ran out of gas on the bridge, he explained, he just took a taxi to the nearest gas station and got a can of fuel.

That was that, except for the police unsnarling their competence.

Republican Will Attend As Adviser To Acheson

Talks Will Concide With Atlantic Pact Council Sessions on Communist Thrusts

The Big Three foreign ministers will meet in London the middle of May to take a long look at cold war problems with heavy emphasis on Communist threats in Germany and the Far East, the State Department disclosed yesterday.

At the same time, Secretary of State Dean Acheson moved to still Republican criticism of his foreign policies by naming former GOP Senator John Sherman Cooper as his adviser at the conference.

The department said the former Kentucky Senator was named only after consultations with Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, chief Republican foreign policy architect, and other Senate GOP leaders. He now is a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations.

Jessup Also Consultant

Acheson's other chief consultant at the foreign ministers' meeting will be United States Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup.

The U. S.-British-French conferences will be held in connection with a meeting of the 12-nation North Atlantic Council—the first important policy session ever held by that group. The council is expected to discuss political questions—rather than military problems—for the first time.

Chiefs of staff of 11 of the 12 pact nations, headed by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, agreed at The Hague yesterday on a master common defense plan under which various countries will have "zones of responsibility." The United States was assigned strategic bombing and supply mission roles.

British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin suggested in notes to Secretary of State Acheson and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman that the Big Three talk over all cold war issues that are keeping Russia and the Western nations at swords points.

"Just About Everything"

One official here said Bevin's proposed agenda called for "just about everything under the sun."

While the United States was agreeable to this general proposal, it was understood Acheson would lay particular stress on the United States desire to repair the German economy as a Communist antidote and to give southeast Asia economic help in her fight against the Reds.

The foreign ministers also will attend the Atlantic Council meeting, the fourth held by that organization. The three previous sessions were organizational meetings at which various nations also presented some strategic military defense plans.

In a formal announcement, the State Department said Bevin invited the council and the foreign ministers to meet in London. The

HALDORE HANSON
Issues challenge

A 37-year-old former newspaperman, charged by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) with having "pro-Communist proclivities," yesterday declared that if McCarthy had been a reporter and not a Senator, he would have been fired for making libelous misstatements.

Haldore Hanson, now a State Department official, went on to tell a Senate subcommittee that if McCarthy would strip himself of congressional immunity, and repeat the charges, he would quickly have a libel suit on his hands.

Like other persons whom McCarthy has accused in recent weeks, Hanson prefaced his defense with a sweeping and complete denial that he had ever been a Communist, Communist sympathizer, member of a front organization or a knowing associate of any foreign espionage agent.

And, he said, all the evidence McCarthy used as the basis of his charge — Hanson's writings — had long since been made available to a complete FBI field investigation. With knowledge of that, and of all his activities, the FBI issued a report on the basis of which he was cleared for loyalty and security by the State Department.

Reported Review Board Audit

Hanson said he also understood that his case had been reviewed in a post-audit by the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board.

Nevertheless, he pointed out, McCarthy told the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee that he had "pro-Communist proclivities" and was a man with "a mission to communize the world."

The charges stemmed almost entirely from a book he wrote in 1939 describing his experiences as a war correspondent in China.

In direct testimony, and again under a quotation-by-quotation cross-examination by subcommittee member Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), Hanson demonstrated factual and textual inaccuracies in McCarthy's charges, or completely misleading inferences from passages taken out of context.

In one case he showed how McCarthy said he was arrested by "anti-Communists," when the next paragraph in his book indicated that there was no arrest.

For or Against Japs

In another case, McCarthy implied he was a Communist sympathizer because he was with the Chinese Communist guerillas and he said they did not tolerate anyone who was not for them. The text showed Hanson wrote that the guerillas judged a man by whether he was for or against the Japanese.

He pointed out his only contact with the guerillas was on an assignment of four months from the Associated Press. He noted that on assignments with the Nationalist forces of Chiang Kai-shek he made equally flattering and equally derogatory comments about them.

He was with the Communists, he said, at the time they had signed a truce with Chiang and were fighting the Japanese under his supreme command. He declared:

"As a reporter, I found that the Chinese Communists were putting up a good fight against the Japanese, and I wrote about them as I saw them.

"Now it is grossly misleading to take objective journalistic reports about the Chinese Communists in 1938, at the time of a United Front with Chiang Kai-shek against Japan, and to deduce from them my attitude toward the Chinese Communists 11 years later, in the midst of a cold war between the democracies and world communism.

Hanson said that if there had been anything pro-Communist about his dispatches, magazine pieces or book, his editors on the Associated Press and the book reviewers would have seen it.

He then read the subcommittee an extensive selection of commendations from those sources, including the Chicago Tribune. The key comment common to most of them was his objectivity in reporting.

In Hickenlooper's examination of Hanson, the most significant questions were a series leading up to an inquiry on whether Hanson agreed with current State Department policy on China. That policy has been characterized by some, Hickenlooper said, as abandoning Chiang and accepting Communist control of China.

Democrats on the committee immediately asked the purpose of the question. Was it to test Hanson's loyalty, McMahon wanted to know.

Not Engaged in Policy-making

Hanson replied that he had never been associated with policy-making in the State Department on China, and hence was not familiar with the "enormous" amount of data that lay behind any determination of policy. Accordingly, he had no opinion of his own, but was willing to assume that the officials who did make the policy knew their business.

Senator Lodge (Mass.), the other Republican on the committee, contented himself with a couple of questions bringing out the fact that Hanson had been investigated by the FBI and thereupon cleared by the State Department and Loyalty Review Board.

More Changes In State Dept. Due in Month

Secretary Acheson is expected to make further changes in the State Department high command within a month.

The shifts, announced Monday night, including the return of Ambassador Philip C. Jessup for an indefinite time, were only the start of an effort to give the Secretary stronger top-level advisers.

The Secretary is determined to bring new blood into his group of policy advisers, an informed source said yesterday. He is trying to find men who are not battle weary after years in the Government and who are not instinctively afraid of meeting problems with action.

Counselor Post to Be Vacant

The post of counselor of the department, one that involves no administrative burdens, will become vacant in June when George Kennan starts his long-planned leave of absence. This will give Acheson a chance to recruit at least one new adviser who can help, with Jessup to share the burdens of the Secretary's job.

Officials hoped their congressional problems would be eased by the transfer of Assistant Secretary W. Walton Butterworth out of the Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs. Butterworth will apply himself entirely to Japanese problems, working directly with the Secretary.

Because he served in China with Gen. George C. Marshall, Butterworth has been under constant attack as a "symbol of a policy that failed," as Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) once described him. His successor, Dean Rusk, has never been tarred with the China brush, although, as Deputy Undersecretary during the past year, he has been an important policy-maker at the State Department.

"Hill" Conference Today

The Secretary is expected to take Rusk, Butterworth and Jessup with him this morning for a closed-door meeting with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Butterworth and Jessup returned recently from long trips to the Far East, and both can give the Senators a first-hand picture of the situation in Japan and southeast Asia.

The State Department changes were not enough to prevent two attacks in Congress yesterday. In the Senate one of the department's most persistent critics, Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) protested the ruling of a British court in Hongkong that 71 planes were the rightful property of the Chinese Communists. The planes formerly belonged to Gen. Claire L. Chennault's Chinese Nationalist Commercial Airlines.

Keefe Attacks Jessup

Knowland said the British "cannot for long expect the cooperation of the American government and people" in Europe "while they play footie with the Communists in Asia."

In the House a renewed attack on Jessup came from Representative Frank B. Keefe (R., Wis.), despite Jessup's angry denials of the charge by Senator Joseph C. McCarthy (R., Wis.) of an alleged fondness for Communist causes.

Keefe called attention to Jessup's connection at one time with the Institute of Pacific Relations, and demanded, "How pink does an individual have to be be before he is recognized for what he is?"

In Commerce Job

Malone Hits At 'Protege' Of Wallace

By The Associated Press

Senator Malone (R., Nev.) said yesterday he understands a "protege" of former Vice President Henry Wallace has power in the Commerce Department to nullify findings of the department's loyalty board.

Gladieux

Testifying before a Senate committee, Malone named the man as Bernard L. Gladieux. He said Gladieux got a high place in the department when Wallace headed it and is now employed in Secretary of Commerce Sawyer's office.

Wallace broke with President Truman in 1946 over policies toward Russia and was ousted from the Cabinet.

Malone mentioned Gladieux in urging a Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee to approve a resolution he introduced last month for an investigation of Michael J. Lee, chief of the far eastern branch of the Office of International Trade. The office is an agency of the Commerce Department.

Should Be Fired, He Says

Malone contends that Lee "is not a good security risk" and should be ousted from his job.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., told the committee that Lee was cleared by the department's loyalty board in August, 1949, but he said a supplemental investigation now is under way.

"Certain additional information was forwarded by the Civil Service Commission to the department's loyalty board" last January 11, Blaisdell said, and the FBI completed a supplemental investigation of Lee on February 23.

The loyalty board started hearings on March 9, Blaisdell continued, but these have not yet been completed.

Malone testified that he had "strong reason to believe" that the department's loyalty board, in its first investigation, found Lee was a security risk and was overruled "somewhere along the line."

He said he did not know, but had been informed that Gladieux could have and "probably" was the one who upset the board's findings—if it was overruled.

He said he understood that Bladieux "has exercised the power of nuulifying decisions" of the loyalty board.

Service to Department Praised

In his Senate speech last month, Malone said Lee is a Manchurian-born Russian who was denied citizenship three times by this country. He accused him of blocking vital war shipments to the Chinese Nationalists during their fight against the Communists.

Loyalty Files Denied Probers by Truman

Mr. Richardson's report, I will advise your subcommittee further."

The proposal that the "dilemma of the files" be resolved by turning them over to the Loyalty Review Board, for a report to the President and the Tydings subcommittee, was suggested in an editorial of The Washington Post on March 18.

Mr. Truman's explanation of his reasons for refusing to give the Senate the loyalty files followed closely the arguments heard by the Tydings group the previous day, propounded by Attorney General McGrath and by FBI Director Hoover.

The President said his decision was based on the fact that disclosure of the records would result in:

1. "Serious prejudice to the effectiveness of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as an investigative agency."

2. "Embarrassment and danger to confidential informants."

3. "Injustice and unfairness to innocent individuals."

Mr. Truman quoted Hoover as saying public disclosure of FBI reports would apply "additional shackles to the FBI," and "place in jeopardy the lives of confidential sources of information."

Danger of Blackmail

Among other things, Hoover contended disclosure of reports "could contribute to blackmail of persons investigated" or result "in degrading persons who have made a mistake or fallen prey to false propaganda."

Mr. Truman said he had been led to the "inescapable conclusion" that "the single most important element in an effective and at the same time just and fair loyalty program was the preservation of all files in connection therewith in the strictest confidence."

"I cannot over-emphasize this point," Mr. Truman said.

The Loyalty Review Board that will make the study of the persons charged by McCarthy is a non-partisan body made up of 20 prominent Americans.

A highly placed source in the board said panels would be quickly formed and go to work at once on the cases. If, as seems likely, there are about 90 cases to study, a final report may not be completed for a matter of two or three months, it was indicated.

Meantime, it was not clear what the Tydings subcommittee will do in the interim. It has tentatively set April 4 as the date on which to hear Owen J. Lattimore, the man whom McCarthy has called the "top Soviet espionage agent" in this country.

In accordance with a promise of Tydings, it will also hear statements in reply to McCarthy's charges from the other persons he has named publicly.

These include State Department Diplomat John S. Service, Navy scientist Stephen Brunauer, United Nations official Gustavo Duran, Harvard astronomer Harlow Shapley, and Williams College professor Frederick Schuman.

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), a member of the Tydings subcommittee, proposed that it proceed with its own investigation, with the funds and three investigators it has available.

This could be done, he noted, while the Richardson board is making its study. Meantime, he said, McCarthy could give what information he has to the subcommittee investigators.

McMahon said he considered the Richardson board "first class" and thought their review would be "helpful."

But Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) charged to reporters that the President's decision meant that "five Senators on the Foreign Relations Subcommittee aren't as competent to look at the files" as the appointed members of the loyalty board.

"The President is going to make his own investigation and he will make his own report to the people. That isn't what the Senate ordered," he said.

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) called the President's decision "shocking" and "shameful" and said the Senate should find him in contempt of that body, and test the case in the Supreme Court.

McCarthy, who indicated Monday he would present to the Senate more evidence on Lattimore yesterday, will not take the floor until today or Thursday, it was indicated. The Senate had agreed to take up another matter, leaving no time for his presentation until then.

McCarthy Getting 2000 Letters a Day

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) said yesterday he was being "snowed under" by more than 2000 letters a day in response to his charges that the State Department has harbored many Communist sympathizers and that 95 percent of the letter-writers support his stand.

A check of a dozen other Senators disclosed, however, that their mail on the headline-making McCarthy-State Department battle has been "surprisingly light" and divided almost equally for and against the Wisconsin Republican.

ADA Spokesman Says Present Laws Are Adequate

By the United Press

A spokesman for Americans for Democratic Action said yesterday that the Mundt-Ferguson-Nixon anti-Communist bill would "greatly enhance the chance for Communist success" by driving the party under ground.

Benjamin C. Sigal, Washington attorney representing ADA, said that while his organization is "unalterably opposed to communism . . . we recognize the perils of which this legislation would expose the whole Nation."

He testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee, which is expected to approve the bill. Sigal said he believes present laws are adequate "to combat any clear and present danger of communism."

Ike's Indorsement Might Hike AF Funds

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Air Force and Navy plane procurement funds will be sharply boosted if Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower supports an already-prevalent Congressional belief that American air power is too weak.

This was the forecast of veteran Capitol Hill leaders as the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee prepared to hear Ike today.

The general, whose cryptic comment that American disarmament has gone too far, caused Congress to take a new look at the military budget, will testify behind closed doors at 2 p. m.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee said yesterday amendments will be offered to the omnibus appropriations bill to increase Air Force and Naval aviation funds if Eisenhower backs up his earlier statement.

He indicated no attempt will be made on the House floor to make any major changes in the military section of the funds bill if Ike explains that his comment was misinterpreted.

Eisenhower told a New York audience last week the United States has "disarmed to the extent—in some directions even beyond the extent—than I, with deep concern for her present safety, could possibly advise."

He did not elaborate on this remark and some members of Congress feel he did not mean to imply that the military budget is inadequate, since he helped prepare it. The Senate Subcommittee promptly invited the general to explain and expand upon his statement.

Vinson, however, is confident Ike meant just what he said. He says that while Eisenhwer played a major role in preparing the 1951 military budget, he did not take part in fixing the 13 billion dollar ceiling but only in apportioning that amount among the services.

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), a leader of the economy bloc, told reporters that if Eisenhower says we need more money for defense, he will vote for it. Congress is "almost sure to do something about it," if Ike says we are underarmed, he declared.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Undersecretary of Defense Stephen Early has agreed to remain in his post until August 1. Early had said earlier he was leaving in May, but Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson told reporters Monday in Key West, Fla., that his aide had received an "indefinite" extension of leave from the Pullman Co., of which he is vice president.

In another defense development, Representative Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) said he would introduce an amendment to the appropriation adding one million dollars to train Coast Guard Reservists for port security duties.

World Fund Names New Staff Aides

The International Monetary Fund yesterday announced four appointments, including the naming of Frederick W. Gray to be treasurer, and reassignment of several members of the staff.

Wills

Y. C. Koo has been appointed deputy treasurer, David H. Wills director of public relations and George A. Blowers special adviser in the exchange restrictions department.

As part of the reassignment of staff functions in the fund, the following appointments of present staff members have also been made:

George F. Luthringer has been appointed deputy director of a newly established Latin American, middle eastern and far eastern department. William H. Taylor has been appointed assistant director of this department.

Jan V. Mladek has been appointed Deputy Director of a newly established European and North American department. Andre Pailhas has been designated special adviser in this department.

Irving S. Friedman has been appointed deputy director of a newly established exchange restrictions department, in which Blowers will serve as special adviser.

In the new treasurer's department, Charles M. Powell will serve as comptroller and assistant treasurer.

Oscar L. Altman has been designated director of administration in charge of the office of administration.

Gordon Williams has been appointed special representative to the United Nations.

Wills, the new public relations director, has been Washington bureau chief for the Reporter, Washington correspondent for the London Financial Times, commentator for Station WMAL and the American Broadcasting Co., and director of information for the British Supply Council and combined supply boards during the war. He has also been associated in various capacities with the London Economist and other British and American publications.

Downey's Condition Varies in Reports

Reports on the condition of Senator Downey (D., Calif.) differed here yesterday.

Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician, said Downey is in Bethesda Naval Hospital for a physical checkup and that he is "not seriously ill."

Friends of the Senator said Downey has an ulcer which will require him to rest. They regarded this as serious from the standpoint of timing in his campaign for re-election.

Acheson Gives Assurance on Arms to Arabs

By the United Press

A congressional delegation said Secretary of State Dean Acheson assured them yesterday there is no cause for alarm over British arms shipments to Arab states.

Twenty-seven Congressmen from seven States met with Acheson. They want the United States either to use its influence to stop the shipments or to permit Israel to buy war goods in this country.

Representative Anthony F. Tauriello (D. N. Y.) quoted the Secretary as saying the arms are being used to maintain a balance of power and not for aggressive purposes. The United States forbids the export of arms if there is reason to believe they would be used for aggressive purposes.

Tauriello also said Acheson reported the State Department is considering two Israeli applications for United States arms. The Jewish state is said to have applied for planes and tanks and equipment to service and maintain them.

House Move Seeks to End U.S. Yalta Role

A resolution declaring the Yalta agreement no longer binding on the United States was introduced yesterday in the House by Representative Hale (R., Me.).

The agreement was signed at Yalta, USSR, in February, 1945, by representatives of the United States, the United Kingdom and Russia and committed the three governments to the principle that liberated nations should have the right to choose their own form of government.

Hale said Russia has ignored the agreement by interfering in the internal affairs of Poland, Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Yugoslavia and preventing free elections in those countries.

Withdrawal of the United States from the Yalta agreement, he said, "will reemphasize to the peoples of the world the adherence of the United States to the principles of the Atlantic Charter and will serve to give hope to the subjugated peoples of Europe through knowledge that the United States is mindful of their desire to achieve independence and self-government.

Parley Set By Pakistan, India Chiefs

By Margaret Parton

Karachi, Pakistan, March 28. (NYHT)—The prime ministers of Pakistan and India will meet shortly in New Delhi to discuss the tense communal situation in divided Bengal, Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan of Pakistan announced today in the Constituent Assembly.

In recent correspondence between the two premiers, Liaquat Ali said it was agreed a personal meeting was essential to find a solution to the religious riots and persistent war talk in the press of both countries, which is spreading panic in Bengal and driving hundreds of thousands of persons from their homes.

While East Bengal, Pakistan, has been quiet for several weeks, it has become increasingly evident that the emotional tide is still running so high in West Bengal, India, that the police are unable to control daily incidents of stabbing and arson.

Republic of Texas Haunts U. S. In High Court on Tideland Oil

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Republic of Texas yesterday came back to haunt the Government of the United States in the tidelands oil case.

For nearly four hours Price Daniel, the Lone Star State's peppery attorney general, argued before the Supreme Court that Texas brought with it into the Union in 1845 control of the multi-million dollar oil-rich offshore areas generally known as the tidelands.

At one point Daniel said in reply to a question by Justice Black that Texas was, in fact, contending it was different from all other States because of its prior status as an independent nation.

Daniel told of the Texas Navy which once patrolled the Gulf Coast, of a treaty with Mexico which he said recognized Texas' control of an offshore belt extending out 9 miles, and of the "treaty" of annexation between the Republic of Sam Houston and the United States of James Buchanan. He cited old rulings that a nation controls its offshore seas and the lands under it and he contended that this control did not pass to the United States with annexation.

Texas does admit, however, that the Federal Government can control the use of the offshore water for national defense and other national purposes. All it wants is control of the oil and any other valuables under the seabeds.

At the very least, Daniel argued to an unusually rapt court, Texas should be granted the right to present more evidence—old letters, newspapers, diaries and the testimony of aged witnesses—to back up its claim before the court makes a ruling.

But Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman, arguing for the Government, contended that Texas entered the Union on an "equal footing" with all other States "yet they now claim they would be superior to every other State" if their tidelands control is upheld. Perlman argued that the 1947 decision in the California case, awarding the "paramount" interest in the offshore area to the United States, should control in Texas' case as well. He made the same argument on Monday in the Government's similar suit against Louisiana.

Perlman attacked Daniel's request for a trial or other means of presenting additional evidence as designed "just to postpone and delay," and he charged Texas with using "every dilatory motion" to delay the case.

Move Grows For Pact Soon With Japanese

By The Associated Press

Strong pressure is building up inside the Truman Administration for an early peace treaty with Japan.

Roving Ambassador Philip Jessup is understood to have advised State and Defense Department leaders he considers such a step desirable.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme allied occupation commander in Japan, is authoritatively reported to have expressed the same view to American diplomats who have conferred with him in recent weeks.

Jessup and Secretary of State Acheson are scheduled to appear before Senate and House foreign committee today, and the proposed treaty may be discussed then.

The pressures which have been building up may force a decision soon between those who want an early treaty—a group principally in the State Department—and those who believe the treaty project should be shelved to prolong indefinitely the present American control over Japan's future and its military position in the western Pacific. This latter view is held mainly by military officials, for whom Army Undersecretary Tracy Voorhees has been the leader and advocate.

Voorhees has resigned his job effective this spring, and that fact may, in the view of some diplomats, weaken the anti-peace treaty forces to such an extent as to turn the balance decisively in favor of a pact.

The British Government took the stand months ago that a treaty should be completed at the earliest possible date.

Britain to Cut Dollar Imports

London, March 28.—Britain's Labor government reaffirmed today its hope that the sterling area, by reducing dollar imports about one fourth, will be able to cut its annual gold-dollar deficit in half by mid-1951.

Purchases from the United States and other dollar countries are to be slashed 25 percent in the period from July 1, 1950, to June 30, 1951.

Originally proposed to the Organization for European Economic Cooperation last January, the cuts were outlined in a Treasury white paper, "Economic Survey for 1950," issued today.

The government has said items on which dollar spending must be cut include bread grains, sugar, tobacco, petroleum products, steel, timber, and pulp and paper.

The white paper, bristling with "ifs," said the reduction from a dollar deficit of $1,531,000,000 for 1949 to one of 785 million dollars for 12 months ending June 30, 1951, can be accomplished under the following conditions:

1. Business continues good in the United States.
2. The lid is kept on wages, prices and dividends in Britain.
3. British productivity goes on improving with no sharp increase in costs.
4. Exports to dollar markets increase sufficiently to offset the cut in the value of the pound last September from $4.03 to $2.80.
5. Gold earning exports to South Africa can be stepped up.
6. The dollar nations demonstrate readiness to accept imports

Big 3 Arrange Cold War Talk

United States promptly accepted and urged the other pact nations to follow suit. Some accepted at a meeting here Monday of representatives of the pact's diplomatic missions. Others are expected to follow suit soon.

"In view of the desire of Mr. Bevin, Mr. Schuman and the Secretary to meet as often as is useful and convenient, they will take the opportunity afforded by the council meeting to conduct discussions on certain other problems of mutual concern," the Department said.

It added that the United States has been considering such a meeting "for some time" and that other North Atlantic nations have inquired about the possibility of a conference this spring.

Members of the North Atlantic pact are Iceland, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Italy, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Great Britain, and the United States.

Take Initiative From Reds

Acheson is expected to tell Bevin and Schuman that it is time for the west to take the initiative away from the Russians in Germany and the strategic Far East.

The United States feels that the economy of Western Germany must be built up if there is to be an effective answer to Communist propaganda. Some opposition is to be anticipated from the French on this quarter.

As for Southeast Asia, the French probably will be the United States' strongest supporter for drastic action in that area and may be prepared to go even farther than this country.

Diplomatic officials have said the State Department wants to extend "token aid" to such countries as Burma and Vietnam while at the same time encouraging them to join forces with other democratic nations to bolster their economy. The French presumably might want such aid extended to include arms.

Biological Warfare Assailed

Baltimore, March 28 (AP).—A medical authority said today that talk of deadly germ warfare is mostly bunk and hooey.

Dr. Perrin H. Long, professor of preventive medicine at Johns Hopkins University's School of Medicine, made the estimate. He was speaking to a group of doctors gathered here from seven Middle Atlantic States for a week's study of civil defense against atomic bombs.

"In my opinion," he said, "biological warfare is bunk. There is more money wasted and more hooey on that than you can shake a stick at. I speak as a bacteriologist on that subject.

"The only kind of biological warfare that could cause trouble is the foot and mouth disease now raging in Mexico."

Dr. Long said poison gas also is an inefficient method of warfare by modern standards.

The United States armed forces have an elaborate research project in operation on biological warfare, even more secret than work on the A and H-bombs. Its main outpost is at Camp Detrick, near Frederick, Md.

House Cuts Foreign Aid Fund

Marshall Plan as recommended by its Foreign Relations Committee.

Representative Verys told reporters he would seek a roll call reversing the vote on his commodities-for-cash plan.

Means Puzzling Choice

Such a vote would confront Administration leaders with the choice of (1) taking the Vorys plan, which includes a billion in surplus goods, or (2) taking the Fulton-Cooley plan, which provides only 750 million in cash. The ECA has opposed the Vorys scheme as a "strait jacket" on its operations, and probably would prefer to take the cut in the hope of getting it restored in the Senate.

House parliamentarians could think of no way to reverse the cut and still keep the Vorys plan out of the bill. For the 250 million reduction was an amendment, proposed by Representative Francis D. Case (R., S. Dak.) to an amendment by Fulton and Cooley. By approving the Case amendment and then the Fulton-Cooley amendment, the House tied the two inseparably.

There were signs yesterday that the Republicans had made it a matter of party policy to cut the Marshall Plan funds by whatever amount the traffic would bear.

GOP Almost Solid

A Republican policy committee meeting earlier in the day had left the amount of the cut undecided. The 500 million dollar slash, proposed by Representative Lawrence A. Smith (R., Wis.) had the almost solid support of Republicans on the floor at the time, including such party stalwarts as Representatives Charles Halleck (Ind.), John Taaber (N. Y.), Clarence Brown (Ohio) and James W. Wadsworth (N. Y.), in former years a supporter of foreign aid measures.

The 250 million cut produced an even more impressive Republican turnout. Those who voted for it included Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin (Mass.) and Representative Christian Herter (Mass.), a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee. In the tiny group of Republicans voting against the cut were most of the minority on the Foreign Affairs Committee, including Representatives Charles A. Eaton (N. J.), Jacob K. Javits (N. Y.), Walter H. Judd (Minn.) and John Davis Lodge (Conn.).

Little Debate on Cut

There was virtually no debate yesterday over cutting the funds, although Judd declared it would be "most shortsighted economy" and Javits thought it would amount to a vote of lack of confidence in ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman. The clinching argument for the cut came from Representative Case, the author of the winning amendment.

"This is your last chance," he told the members. "If you fail to cut this by 250 million, or less than 10 percent, how can you explain to your people when you cut a rivers and harbors bill by 25 percent?"

The real fireworks came in debating the rival plans to use surplus commodities in the ECA program. At one point eight Representatives were on their feet at once, and tempers were so warm that Vorys complained of a "vicious personal attack" on him by the farm bloc spokesmen.

The Vorys plan to swap commodities for cash had the support of Representatives Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.) and James P. Richards (D., S. C.), both members of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Cooley and Pace for Killing It

Among those who fought hardest to kill it were Chairman Cooley and his Agriculture Committee colleague Stephen Pace (D., Ga.). Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the Banking and Currency Committee warned that the Vorys plan would "loot" the Commodity Credit Corporation and would be a precedent for future "looting."

And Representative Daniel J. Flood (D., Pa.), of the Appropriations Committee, declared that "if there were a direct connection between this House and the Kremlin every member of the Politburo would be slapping his sides in glee."

"The chief argument used against the Marshall Plan," said Flood, "is that it's just a device for dumping our agricultural products abroad." He argued, in spite of denials, that the Vorys plan would have this effect.

House leaders still hoped for a final vote on the entire foreign aid bill by Thursday.

Flying Clubs to Offer Free Rides Over D. C.

The Washington Association of Flying Clubs, which will offer free airplane flights over Washington on "Airport Day" April 30, will discuss final plans for the event tonight.

Members of the 35 clubs in the association will meet at 6:30 at the China Doll Restaurant. Rufus M. Phillips, chairman of the airport facilities committee of the Washington Board of Trade, will be guest speaker.

Electoral Plan Action Sought By House Unit

The House Judiciary Committee began a new attempt yesterday to force House action on a proposed constitutional amendment which would divide the presidential electoral vote according to the popular vote.

The committee approved a Senate-passed version of the measure which differs slightly from an earlier one killed by the House Rules Committee which controls the flow of legislation to the House floor.

Fepresentative Ed Gossett (D., Tex.), one of the authors, has indicated he may try to bypass the rules group this time. This could be done either under the "21-day rule" or through a discharge petition signed by a majority of House members.

The amendment, sponsored by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) would do away with State-by-State bloc voting in the electoral college and divide the electoral vote according to the popular vote.

Undersecretary of Commerce Whitney Submits Resignation

By The Associated Press

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney yesterday said he had submitted his resignation as Undersecretary of Commerce to President Truman.

Whitney said he hoped to leave by May 1.

Reasons for his resignation, he said, were "stated in my letter to President Truman and if he wants to release the letter, he will do so."

Asked whether the letter dealt with operations of the Commerce Department, he said he did not "feel at liberty to disclose" anything in it.

But he recalled he had been away from his numerous business interests for "seven of the last nine years." He said he would like to "get a rest" and return to his business activities.

Whitney, now 51, was named Undersecretary of Commerce in February, 1949, after having served as Assistant Secretary of the Air Force from September, 1947.

He has been acting head of Commerce for the last few weeks while Secretary Sawyer has been at his home in Cincinnati for an operation and rest.

Among the business operations Whitney will resume are the Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting Co., with extensive holdings in Canada. He has been on leave of absence as board chairman of that concern.

Another is Marine Studios, Inc., which operates an "Oceanarium" at St. Augustine, Fla.

Budget Boost Proposed for Child Bureau

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee was told yesterday that the Nation "must keep abreast of science on the human side" if it is to take full advantage of new scientific developments.

George J. Hecht, publisher of Parents Magazine and chairman of the American Patents Committee, urged the Senators to approve a $729,821 increase in the fiscal 1951 budget of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau.

"We are spending millions in manpower and material to explore the whole new realm of science, including the atom bomb and the hydrogen bomb," Hecht said.

"We will need to devote just as much attention to the human beings who are a part of this new world," he said, in order to use the new scientific developments wisely.

Hecht proposed that the $1,520,683 proposed for the Children's Bureau in the 1951 budget, be boosted to $2,250,504.

Laurence Steinhardt Dies in Plane Crash

LAURENCE STEINHARDT
Loses life

Capt. Archibald Col. Trueblood

Department officials at Washington. This was his account:

The plane was flying at 2000 feet when the right-hand engine caught fire. Those aboard donned parachutes.

"The pilot told us all to keep calm and he would give us enough height to jump. I tried to get the rest of them out the door but they said they would stick with the aircraft.

"I knew we were going in. I knew we had to jump or die.

"I finally tried to push them out the door but they would not go."

It was then, Long said, that he jumped alone.

Long landed 500 yards beyond where the plane crashed but in the same field. He was taken to the RCAF Hospital at Rockcliffe Airport, suffering leg injuries and shock.

Among the eyewitnesses was a crew of five electricians and a 12-year-old schoolboy. They said the plane "blew apart in the air" about 50 feet above the ground.

The 57-year-old Steinhardt had served as chief of diplomatic missions in Sweden, Peru, Russia, Turkey and Czechoslovakia at critical periods before, during and after the war. Since 1948, he had been Ambassador to Canada.

The crash occurred a few minutes after Steinhardt and his party left Rockcliffe Airport at Ottawa at 8:20 a. m. on a business mission to New York.

One engine was hurled over a barbed wire fence into another field 50 feet away. One wing had been torn off and was 35 feet away in the other direction.

17 'Hot' Jobs Handled by Steinhardt

United States Ambassador to Canada, Laurence A. Steinhardt, successful New York lawyer turned statesman, handled a lion's share of the United States' hottest diplomatic assignments during the past 17 years of hot and cold wars.

He and four other Americans were killed yesterday when a U. S. Air Force transport crashed 12 miles south of Ottawa.

Before assuming his Canadian post in August, 1948, the graying 6-footer had held a grandstand seat as chief of mission in five South American and European trouble spots.

Mr. Steinhardt saw World War II begin in Moscow. He was United States Ambassador there, and because he saw a German officer acquaintance send a pet dog home four days before the German invasion in 1941, he was able to call the turn on Germany's decision to fight Russia.

There he described his dealings with the suspicious Russians as "trying to cooperate with the inevitable."

Just before Pearl Harbor, Mr. Steinhardt was shifted to Turkey where for three years he was pitted against Hitler's top negotiator, Franz Von Papen. America's non-career man was credited with holding the Turks from entering the German camp.

His last European assignment was a four-year tour of duty in Prague, where he went through the cold war tragedy of Jan Masaryk plunging to his death from a foreign ministry window.

Ambassador Steinhardt always drove his own car on official trips. In Istanbul, he once refereed a baseball game in shirtsleeves between the embassy staff and newsmen.

Mr. Steinhardt leaves his wife, the former Dulcie Yates Hoffman and a 22-year-old daughter, Dulcie Ann.

No Light Planned Near Street Death Site

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp yesterday said it was "very doubtful" that a traffic light would be placed at the intersection of 17th st. and Massachussets ave. se., "within the next few years."

Five-year-old John Stibil of 310 15th st. se. was killed by a truck near the intersection Monday, and parents in the area have repeatedly requested a light there.

Keneipp said the District has a list of 80 intersections that "must" receive traffic lights. Despite this, he said, the Department of Vehicles and Traffic will receive only enough money in the 1950-1951 fiscal year for about a dozen installations.

"The 80 lights," Keneipp pointed out, "would cost us about a quarter of a million dollars. To include such intersections as 17th and Massachusetts would mean to double the cost, bring it to about a half-million.

"Signals are good things, but they can't replace care and common sense.

"Not everybody obeys lights even if the lights are there," he said. "Installation of signals doesn't mean a 'traffic utopia.'"

Keneipp said he would try to get more money for traffic lights at his next budget estimate meeting with District Commissioners.

Meantime, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death in the accident that killed the youngster.

The child, son of Mrs. Bernadette Stibli, was killed when he darted from a triangular "island" on 17th st., apparently headed toward the Southeast Washington Boys Club, close to the scene of the accident.

Officials of the club also have requested a light at the intersection.

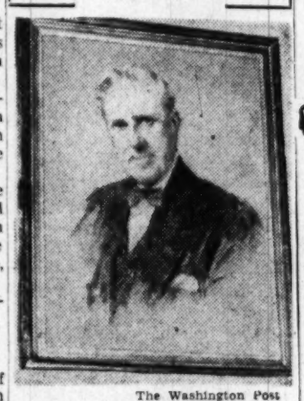
Mundt Claims

State Dept. Loyalties Under Cloud



The Washington Post
YOUNG'S PAINTING
Exhibited at Statler

Senator Karl E. Mundt (R. S. Dak.) charged last night that the American people have lost their confidence in the loyalty of State Department members. He called for a clearance board to recheck employe loyalties.

Mundt said a speaking tour of 25 States led him to the conclusion that the Department and the President, in consultation with Congress, should establish a new board so "everyone shall know that those who are there are good patriotic Americans."

He said at least the people "should have as much confidence in State Department employes as they now have in the agents of the FBI.

A second step proposed by the District Committee member was that the "United States recapture the initiative in foreign policy . . . and not just react to what the Russians have done the day before."

He cited the Truman Doctrine, Marshall Plan and the Point Four program as examples of America following Russian actions, rather than preceding.

He termed the legislation a long step "toward national socialism."

Mundt spoke before a general membership meeting of the Washington Board of Trade at the Statler Hotel. Also on the program were Paul Massman, general manager of the Sesquicentennial Commission, who described plans for the celebration, and seven princesses of the forthcoming Cherry Blossom Festival.

An exhibit of paintings owned—and many painted—by Board of Trade members was shown at the hotel. Included were works by Washington architects, an editor, a hotel representative, newspaper cartoonist an advertising man and John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners.

Trolley Hits Man Crossing Against Light

A 46-year-old man was injured at 1:30 p. m. yesterday when he was struck by a streetcar at 13th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. Police said he was crossing against the traffic light.

He was identified as John Jones, of 1626 15th st. nw. Police said he suffered abrasions of the left leg and possible head injuries. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, transferred to Gallinger Hospital, then released.

Police said the driver of the streetcar was Howard B. McLawhorn, 22, of 4710 N. Washington blvd., Arlington. No charges were filed in the accident.

Ten-year-old Adair Trimble, of Route 236, near Fairfax, Va., was injured yesterday afternoon when the bicycle she was riding was struck by an auto near the driveway of her home.

The child was taken to the Arlington Hospital, where her condition last night was undetermined. Attendants said she suffered a possible brain concussion.

Driver of the car, Newman A. Shifflett, 20, of Clifton, Va., told police the girl rode out of the driveway into the path of his auto. He was charged with reckless driving and released under $500 bond.

2 Held in Inquests In Traffic Deaths

Two men were held yesterday in coroner's inquests into traffic deaths.

James C. Sturgill, 21, of 646 F st. sw., was held on a charge of negligent homicide. He was the driver of the bus which struck and fatally injured Cavour O. Bohrer, 89, of the John Dickson Home, 5000 14th st. nw., at 14th and I sts. nw. last Sunday.

Held for the grand jury was Kegham Patchadjian, 41, of 1508 Madison st., Hyattsville, Md. He was driver of a car January 25 which struck and killed Jacob S. Gruver, 79, of 5460 39th st. nw.

This means the chickens have been scientifically reared to give the finest eggs possible. Get acquainted with GIANT eggs now—and we're sure you will stay with them.
What Makes a GOOD EGG?
GIANT knows the most important points about an egg are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms, thus making it possible for us to bring you eggs of "top" quality in their freshest condition. Egg quality is related to breeding, care and proper scientific feeding of the chicken. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers who are exclusively egg producers and whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production. There's a great difference between eggs produced by chickens which roam the farm picking up "scratch" here and there—and eggs produced by chickens fed with scientific mash (grain, bran) and other fattening foods including a daily ration of buttermilk and even cod liver oil. It's eggs of this latter kind of chickens which GIANT features in every one of its 20 stores setup of the police hierarchy:

Police Promotions For 8 Announced

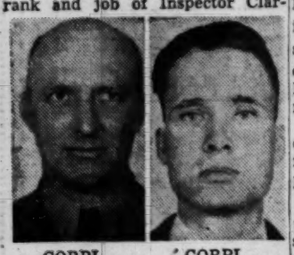
Miller succeeds to the post of assistant superintendent made vacant last December by the death of Inspector Milton D. Smith, and, after nearly 10 years as traffic inspector, will assume charge of the reactivated Police Academy and two other police schools, the traffic and rookie schools.

Storm takes over the executive rank and job of Inspector Clarence Talley, assistant superintendent and head of the uniform forces, who is retiring. Storm had been in charge of police schools.



CORPL. REED

CORPL. WILLARD

Inspector William J. Cunningham, a District supervisor, succeeds Miller as traffic inspector.

Inspector Robert Pearce, the department's chief clerk and property clerk, becomes a District supervisor an dhis headquarters' duties are assumed by Findahl who also retains his assignment as police liaison man to the civilian defense organization being set up for the District.

Clark, who has been only acting commander of the Second Precinct as a lieutenant, now becomes a full-fledged precinct chief with his elevation to captain.

In announcing reactivation of the Police Academy, Barrett said policemen will take four to six-week refresher courses there and will learn the latest techniques in crime prevention and detection.

At the recent hearing of the House District Subcommittee investigating crime in the District, Barrett said the academy had been suspended because of a shortage in personnel. One of the committee members said he thought the academy should be revived.

Storm to Aid

Before assuming his new assignment, Storm will remain with the police schools to thoroughly acquaint Miller with their operation.

Barrett said Storm will be next in line for promotion to executive status if Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, an assistant superintendent, should decide to retire from the department for reasons of poor health.

Although Truscott has been absent recently on leave because of poor health and is currently on sick leave, there has been no indication that he plans to seek retirement at this time.

Commenting on the promotions, Barrett said he thought Fondahl is particularly well qualified to serve as chief clerk and property clerk for the department because he did similar work with the Marine Corps during the war.

His office is responsible for drawing up the police budget and for recovered stolen property.

Refused Promotion

Miller, 53, once before refused promotion to post of assistant superintendent. There were two reasons: the new job meant night duty, and as the department's traffic inspector since June, 1940, he had won national recognition as a traffic expert.

He attended the Northwestern University Traffic Institute in 1939-40, and later, as a member of the National Traffic Law Enforcement Committee, he lectured on traffic flow regulation at New York University Law School.

Miller, who has received four commendations, lives at 7804 Radnor rd., Bethesda, Md.

Storm has climbed fast in his 25 years in the department.

He is 49, married, the father of a 12-year-old son, and lives at 2511 14th st. ne.

He was a lieutenant in the Traffic Division when he was called up as a Marine Reserve in 1940. After serving as a lieutenant colonel in Pacific combat, he returned to the police force as a captain in 1946.

Fondahl, who was transferred from command of the Eighth Precinct to a headquarters assignment earlier this month, is 51 and lives at 4708 Sedgwick st. nw.

Clark, who becomes the "full-authority" boss of the Second Precinct, has been a precinct officer for most of his 26 years as a policeman. He has been commended 21 times.

On March 1, he was named an acting captain and moved from the Thirteenth Precinct to command of the Second Precinct. He is 48, unmarried, and lives at 1315 Belmont st. nw.

Peters, one of the new lieutenants, is administrative assistant to Barrett and is expected to remain in that capacity. He is 48, was appointed in October, 1932, and has been a headquarters aide since 1943. He holds eight commendations. Peters lives at 8204 Cedar st., Silver Spring, Md.

Douglass, currently a sergeant at the First Precinct, was appointed in July, 1927, and has received nine commendations. He is 46 and lives at 2805 Ridge rd. dr., Alexandria, Va.

Six Commendations

Reed, 39, a new sergeant, was appointed in July, 1937. He has six commendations and is now attached to the Thirteenth Precinct. He lives at 4212 N. 23d st., Arlington, Va.

Willard, 38, appointed in October, 1940, is attached to the police training school. He has four commendations and lives at 2212 S st. ne.

The police department also announced these changes of assignment: Twelfth Precinct Detective Joseph D. Loughrin to the detective bureau; Probational Detective George O. Burkley, jr., from special investigations to duty in the precincts, and Pvt. Emmett K. Bell of the general assignment squad to duty as a probational detective.

Tech Munches 25-Cent Lunch

mashed potatoes, hot muffins and a half pint of milk.

Uses Surplus Food

For 20 cents there was the economy meal consisting of beef noodle soup, meat loaf sandwich, apple crisp and a half pint of milk.

McKinley is able to set this table by using surplus commodities the Agriculture Department has been buying up from farmers under its price support program. The foods are made available to schools for the cost of transportation.

In addition to the free food the school also receives a 9-cent-a-plate subsidy under the National School Lunch program.

Hidden in yesterday's menus were dried eggs and milk as well as price-pegged apples, butter, honey and potatoes.

In this way the school has been able to cut the cost of the meals it serves by 10 cents a plate.

Two Schools Selected

Two schools, McKinley and the Negro Garnet-Patterson Junior High School, were selected by the Agriculture Department for an experiment to see how many students would buy a hot nutritious meal if the price was right. Agriculture sent in dietitians to work up menus and to train cafeteria workers in ways of using the surplus foods.

The schools put on a campaign to tell parents that a hot meal at school cost less than a cold lunch packed at home.

Success of the program can be gauged by student participation. When the new price scale went into effect a week ago 110 students bought the lunch as compared with yesterday's 500.

School officials plan to expand the program to other schools. Menus will be passed along to all school cafeterias and the cooks at McKinley and Garnet-Patterson will give demonstrations in the use of dried milk and eggs.

Caldwell Indicted, Arrested in Jury Fix

refused to talk to reporters yesterday.

Lewis was sentenced January 26 to serve from 10 to 30 months in jail by Judge Alexander Holtzoff, after the jurors had deliberated for 19 hours. Convicted with Lewis was Attilio Acalotti, self-styled "Mayor of Thomas Circle," and Frank Billeci, 509 Margaret dr., Silver Spring, Md. Acalotti was sentenced to 8 to 24 months, and Billeci, from 8 to 27 months.

The case is on appeal.

The first count of the Caldwell indictment charges that the night club proprietor "promised and offered a sum of money" to Juror Luraner D. Ivey, 43, charwoman, 49 47th st. se., with intent to influence her decision. Maximum penalty on this count is three years in jail and a fine of $500.

The second count charges Caldwell with causing a sum of money to be offered to Juror Sallie J. Walker, 43, 1329 Montello ave. ne., with intent to influence her decision. Penalties of three years in prison and a $500 fine are also provided on this count.

On the third count, Caldwell is charged with offering a sum of money to Robert C. Fraction, 2705 Stanton rd., se., a member of the jury panel from which the Lewis jury was picked.

The money was offered, according to the indictment, "with intent to influence Fraction to aid in committing a fraud . . . the said fraud being to promise and offer money to the petit jurors with intent to influence" their verdict. This count also carries a penalty of $500 fines and three years in prison.

The fourth count of the indictment is the only one to charge violation of a United States law. It charges that Caldwell offered Fraction money to obtain information from the Lewis jurors. Maximum penalty is five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Laurence Steinhardt

The sad death of Laurence Steinhardt in Canada robs the diplomatic service of an envoy with much experience and considerable energy. Steinhardt was a forceful personality, impatient of protocol, not to mention the practitioners of it. He preferred to think of himself in the homespun tradition which he said was lacking in the modern service of the United States. Accordingly he was accustomed to speak his mind without reservation on news and prospects, and if at times he was wrong, he was often right. Some diplomats have gone to their graves after a career of mistakes made in complete silence and without record. While Ambassador to Russia, Steinhardt was caught short in Stockholm by the outbreak of the Russo-Finnish war of 1939, but he kept the department well and truly posted about Russian designs from his vantage point at Ankara. Steinhardt, who did valiant diplomatic service during the war, devoted himself without stint to his duties.

Diplomatic Shifts

Secretary Acheson is engaged in making top staff changes in the State Department. The object seems to be to improve the kind of staff work which consists of batting up through channels courses of action as well as courses of reaction to Soviet actions. At present there is too much of what we have hitherto called purely countervailing diplomacy.

It is a gain that Philip Jessup will keep his assignment as ambassador at large. A rover of the caliber of Mr. Jessup is an invaluable aid, and few Presidents and Secretaries of State have been without one. Mr. Walton Butterworth's move to whole-time work on Japan testifies to the importance of coming to grips with the task of making peace with Japan. The broader field of the Far East which Mr. Butterworth covered is given to Dean Rusk. Mr. Rusk has had the assignment as Deputy Undersecretary, and as such has kept close to both the National Security Council and the United Nations. In his relatively short diplomatic experience he has acquired an excellent reputation for good work and sound judgment.

When Mr. Acheson completes his reorganization at the top, he will be enabled to keep that wide survey and forward view which is singularly his responsibility, if he is to discharge his relation to the President properly. He cannot do this, of course, so long as the vexatious harassment of him continues on the Hill. For, aside from taking up an unconscionable amount of time, this drain on the Secretary's energies is bound to constrain him in that freedom of maneuver which is the prerequisite of diplomacy.

Port Security

Although Congress has been unusually attentive to most matters of military defense, the security of American seaports—a responsibility of the Coast Guard—has received short shrift. Adequate patrolling of harbors and piers and inspection of vessels in wartime would require a great expansion in the Coast Guard's 22,000-man force. Yet the Coast Guard Reserve, which would be the nucleus for such expansion, has received no funds for training.

Actually the denial probably is due more to the anomalous status of the Coast Guard than to any deliberate effort to deprive it of funds. In wartime the Coast Guard becomes a part of the Navy, but in peacetime it is under the Treasury. Thus the $4,100,000 for reserve training recommended in the President's 1951 budget came under the jurisdiction of the Treasury-Postoffice Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee. But since the full committee had laid down a rule against new appropriations, the funds were knocked out of the omnibus bill. Similar misfortunes befell the request in the 1949 and 1950 budgets, though last year the Senate did pass a $3½ million deficiency appropriation which was eliminated in conference.

Whatever the reasons for the oversight, it is apparent that here is a defect in defense which must be remedied. Both Defense Secretary Johnson and the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Sherman, have attested to the need. An adequately trained Coast Guard would be imperative in an atomic war, when an innocent-appearing freighter might blow up a harbor and a city. We urge the full House to recognize the necessity for this protection against sabotage when an amendment providing Coast Guard Reserve funds is offered from the floor.

U. N. As A Morgue

Two more Soviet walkouts at Lake Success have been added to the others in turning the United Nations into a morgue. The impasse in the U. N. is intimately related to China, for the Russian walkouts are concerned with Chinese representation. The Russians won't come back to the Security Council till the Communist takes the Nationalist place in the Security Council. Secretary General Lie thinks that in this respect the credentials of the new regime in China have a sound title warranting acceptance of the new regime as the controller of Chinese territory. We agree with him. The Peking government has as much authority as any government in Chinese Republican history, and that authority has never been 100 percent. If the issue could be settled in Peking's favor in a kind of Jessup-Malik talk, then the Security Council could resume business, preferably with the first meeting composed of Foreign Ministers as authorized under Article 28.

This would serve to bring the United States and the Soviet together again around the conference table. And nothing is more important as showing the world that America's fundamental aim is to pursue peace. Nothing in particular might come of it, but the first task of our foreign policy is to keep the door open to the Soviet Union, and the best door is the one in the Security Council. Mr Byrnes had a guiding rule as Secretary of State: never stop talking. It is a sound rule, as was illustrated in the case of the struggle over Berlin. This brought the United States close to war, yet the diplomats never threw up their hands, but kept on talking with the Russians.

It would be folly to compound the diplomatic defeat we have sustained in China by refusing to deal with realities. A lesson here is provided in the Von Bulow memoirs. When Bethman-Hollweg took over the Chancellorship of Germany before the last war, he said he found the situation "irremediably compromised," meaning that his predecessor had made the 1914 war inevitable. Von Bulow was his predecessor, and he retorted that, if he had been in power, he would never have allowed the Balkan war to blow up in general catastrophe. Nothing was worse, he said, than the "fatalistic doctrine" of diplomacy; on occasion it must accept a "diplomatic defeat" and start again. There are many illustrations in our times. Moscow, for instance, has recognized Hatta in Indonesia, though it strained every nerve to keep him out of office.

Acceptance of a representation policy in the United Nations would not necessarily mean recognition of Communist China by the United States. But it would serve a realistic purpose in addition to that of reassembling the conference table at Lake Success. It would pave the way for the return of American influence in China. It would put the Chinese Communists along with all other U. N. members always before the bar of world opinion. We don't say this would ipso facto induce a sense of responsibility in Peking. By no means. But to make a government a pariah—especially when the U. N. embraces all kinds and conditions of governments—is to put a premium on nuisance, and the place where the Chinese can be and threaten to be a nuisance is on the northern border of Indo-China. If anything happens there, the challenge, as Secretary Acheson has reaffirmed, will be and should be met, and not half-heartedly either. The deadly seriousness of the American intent needs to be put before the Chinese face to face, not across a space to a capital which looks at America and the world, as Peking does, with an astigmatic as well as a jaundiced vision.

Fleming's Letter

A remarkable agglomerate of confusion has wound up the new hearings of the Hardy Subcommittee on the subsidy excesses of the soon-to-be-abolished Maritime Commission. Perhaps the highlight of a pretty shabby performance by the Maritime Commissioners was the introduction on Monday of a letter from Commission Chairman Fleming to the Attorney General, dated February 3, stating plainly that he supported the subsidy actions in question. This development came just after General Fleming had testified that the review of past subsidy determinations was still in progress—in other words, that he had not made up his mind.

Last fall a scorching report by the Comptroller General charged, among other things, that the Maritime Commission had lost some 25 million dollars in the granting of unjustified subsidies and national defense allowances on three contracts involving six ships. The Hardy Subcommittee of the House Executive Expenditures Committee held extensive hearings on commission practices with respect to ship construction subsidies, and its report, backing up the Comptroller General, was adopted unanimously by the full committee. As a result, President Truman called upon the Maritime Commission to review its actions and asked the Attorney General to investigate the interpretation of the Merchant Marine Act. General Fleming's letter to the Attorney General was offered in connection with this request.

Although he took a definite stand in the February 3 letter, General Fleming testified later that the matter was still under review. This was his position before the Thomas Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee on February 6. On February 7 he testified that Commissioner Mellen's letter of last September attempting to rebut all the Comptroller General's charges was no longer the official line. Yet on February 24 he wrote Representative Thomas agreeing with the Mellen letter and asserting that everything the commission had done was legal and proper and required no amendment.

These inconsistencies are magnified by the curious manner in which General Fleming's letter to the Attorney General was composed. He stated, for example, that he usually consulted the full commission on policy matters. Certainly this was a major policy decision. Yet it was brought out in the hearing that General Fleming wrote this letter without consultation—surely a usurpation of authority. He stated that he had sent copies to all members of the commission. Yet Commissioner McKeough (the one-man minority exonerated by the previous Hardy report) testified that he had to get his copy from the Attorney General's office; and even Commissioner Carson, though he agreed with the letter, admitted confusion over how he obtained his copy.

What all this shameful pulling and hauling demonstrates is, first, that the chairman of the commission has associated himself definitely with the subsidy excesses on the part of the commission majority that led to the presidential reorganization; and, second, that either General Fleming's memory is very poor or his testimony was deliberately at variance with the facts. Surely the President should require no more evidence that both he and the public have been poorly served by the men to whom the Maritime Commission has been entrusted, with the conspicuous exception of Mr. McKeough. It would be compounding the disgrace to carry such men over as members of the new Maritime Board.

FBI Files

Senator Tydings' issuance of a subpena to obtain FBI confidential files is a piece of folly forced on him by the obnoxious terms of the Senate resolution creating the subcommittee which he heads. Neither the director of the FBI nor the Attorney General can accede to the subpena's demand. They are under explicit orders from the President to refuse to do so. And if the Senate shows such flagrant discourtesy and disregard for the President's constitutional authority as to extend the subpena to him, he will certainly ignore it—and quite rightly. In doing so he will follow an honorable precedent set by George Washington and adhered to by all subsequent occupants of the White House.

The President has the responsibility of determining what executive papers it is in the public interest to submit to Congress. In the light of the testimony given to the Senate subcommittee on Monday by Attorney General McGrath and FBI Director Hoover, a decision by the President to forbid surrender of the FBI's files would seem to be dictated by elementary prudence as well as by principle. He has already gone to the legitimate limit in accommodating Senator McCarthy's curiosity by making available to the subcommittee a complete analysis of the one file on which the Senator said he would rest his entire case.

In explaining his reluctance to surrender FBI files, J. Edgar Hoover made, as Senator Lodge put it, "a very convincing exposition." Two types of danger are involved. One is that injustice may be done to individuals. The files contain unsifted allegations. They also contain names of persons other than the subject of investigation—persons who may well be altogether innocent of wrongdoing. "I would not want to be a party," said Mr. Hoover, "to any action which would 'smear' innocent individuals for the rest of their lives. We cannot disregard the fundamental principles of common decency and the application of basic American rights of fair play in the administration of the FBI."

It is not to be expected, of course, that this argument will seem persuasive to Senator McCarthy. But anyone as exercised as he pretends to be about national security ought to be persuaded by the other type of danger pointed out by Mr. Hoover.

> The disclosure of the contents of the files of the FBI would reveal confidential procedures and techniques. If spread upon the record, criminals, foreign agents, subversives and others would be forewarned. In the conduct of official investigations, information of a highly restricted nature having a direct bearing upon national security often finds its way into the files which, if disclosed, would be of considerable value to a foreign power. Increasingly, we have observed efforts of a foreign power to seek intimate personal details concerning many of our leaders in Government and industry. They should not be aided by having these details made public for their use and advantage, thereby crippling the important work of the FBI.

Mr. McCarthy's position seems to be that he cannot personally protect the security of the country against espionage without injuring the agency officially designated to furnish such protection. We hazard a guess that if the American people must choose between an unhampered FBI and an unhampered Senator McCarthy they will prefer to rely for their protection on the former.

Atlantic Chance

The Hague is at present the venue of the defense chiefs of the signatories of the Atlantic Pact. They are meeting in order to carry out the obligations of that instrument. Doubtless little will be heard about the deliberations, for they deal singularly with the security of all the members, but the ministers might well be urged to keep in the forefront of their minds the opportunity of striking a real blow in behalf of integration. Nothing was so clearly stressed by the Congress as the onus put upon the signatories each to contribute his specialty to the common pool. Tanks, for instance, could be made in one country, machine guns in another. This specialization of function, in the economists' language, is what will give strength and integrity to the alliance. In addition, a division of labor in providing military goods would be the starter for the more comprehensive industrial integration that American policy is aiming at.

Kerr Natural Gas Bill

Why is it that a subject that evokes galleys of editorial comment before consideration by the Congress becomes wholly unnewsworthy when pro-and-con arguments are made on the Senate floor. I refer particularly to news treatment of the "infamous Kerr natural gas bill."

Perhaps the fairest of a deluge of unfavorable comment on this proposed legislation was contained in your editorial section. Although the background of this bill was not given, a studied and fairly accurate presentation was recorded by your editorial staff. This varies considerably with the fact-starved, transom-peeking, congressional window-peeking columnist on your comic page whose "startling revelations" have violated in the vilest form the great creed of the American press of presenting readers comment and news material based only on fact.

Few of your readers know the bill was introduced at the suggestion of the Oklahoma State Legislature, and even fewer have the slightest knowledge of what it intends to accomplish in the manner of actually benefitting the American natural gas consumer.

This bill has three times been passed by one house of the Congress—and in a more objectionable form than the present measure. It has passed the House of Representatives this Congress and, in all probability, will become a public law, for too many fact-conscious Senators know the full story of the bill and that the Natural Gas Act of 1938 needs clarification.

Senator Kerr, being in the natural gas business, may have erred in cosponsoring this measure with his Oklahoma colleague, Senator Elmer Thomas, at the persistent request of their State Legislature. It will be noted upon examining the Congressional Record, however, that tremendous benefit has been gained by the Senate in having as one of its members one so completely well-versed in this subject. GI Trade Schools

One of the sweetest rackets perpetuated in this country after the war has been the organizing of schools to "teach" ex-GI's a trade. It's true that all the GI's couldn't get into Yale, Harvard, Hopkins and the other schools; and the Government had to make the plan apply to all so they probably blinked their eyes at the new schools that were organized.

But if a GI doesn't pass the requirements at the big schools, he is let out. Not with some of the so-called trade schools. The owners want students in and, since the Government is lax in its supervision, all a student had to do is to come in and punch a time clock. He still gets his Government allowance and the schools get their easy money from the Government.

There is no strict supervision by the Government as to the qualifications of the teachers or instructors. All a fellow had to do was get up a curriculum that sounded good and the VA gave him permission to organize a school.

How much longer is this racket going to bleed the public tax money? FRED MILLER.

Leave Policy

In the current discussions about reducing annual leave and leave carryovers for Federal workers, one looks hopefully but in vain for signs that all facets of the problem are being considered as a whole. Among these facets I would suggest the following:

1. Business practice favors leave graduated according to length of service. This favors career employes, discourages turnover, and accords with the physical needs of increasing age.

2. Leave accounting problems favor a round number of hours credited per pay period, rather than a round number of days per year.

3. Encouragement of Nation-wide representation in Washington jobs may make an additional travel-time allowance desirable for employes from distant States, if leaves are greatly reduced.

4. Federal workers receive no severance pay nor are they part of the Social Security program, making some allowance desirable in case of layoff.

5. Attention should be given to discouraging abuse of sick leave benefits, most profitably by positive rather than negative means.

6. The destrability of allowing some year-to-year carryover to allow for unavoidable delays resulting from work, illness, births, etc. 10-YEAR MAN.

DPs And Employment

I read with interest your March 20 editorial, "Chronic Unemployment." I wish you had made mention of the thousands of displaced persons entering our country who evidently are securing some manner of employment that could readily be handled by our own citizens. Don't you think this is a slight contributing factor in unemployment? JAMES BAUGH, Jr.
Washington.

'Informing The World'

Your March 26 editorial, "Informing the World," emphasized the one feature of the cold war which will decide whether we win or lose it. Our Marshall Plan, Atlantic Pact, Point Four, and ECA are all well and good, and have their proper place in our strategy, but we will get more results for our dollars spent in a well-planned program of information and education, than in all of these other programs combined. And without this sort of a program our economic and military aid programs will definitely not achieve their ends.

In this program of information and education of other people on the meaning of democracy and on America's attitudes and intentions, there is one type of activity that has had entirely too little attention. I refer to direct, personal propaganda by persons who know and love America, know democracy, and know the people and the conditions in a particular country. The suspicions regarding America's economic aid that are built up by clever Communist propaganda can be dispelled only by the personal impact of those who are known and respected by the people of the various countries in which such suspicions have taken hold.

Building up friendship for and confidence in America can be done satisfactorily only by those who have had years of experience to qualify and train them for this vitally important part of the program. Except in some rare cases, the men appointed to administer our various international programs do not have this background of experience. They are strangers in the countries to which they are sent, and it will take them a long time to win the confidence of the people and secure their sympathetic cooperation in our efforts to help them. Meanwhile Communist agents are taking advantage of every mistake that our administrators and specialists make; their lack of understanding of native psychology, culture, and customs, and are building up in the minds of the nationals confusion, suspicion, and hatred.

Our regular diplomatic staffs—ambassadors, ministers, consuls, etc.—cannot adequately perform this function of "making friends and influencing people." The very nature of their positions prevents the type of activity that is demanded. They are the official diplomatic representatives of America, and they are not supposed to identify themselves with local causes and organizations.

The people of the countries that we are helping are, for the most part, friendly and grateful, and they would like to know more about us, and why we are spending our money so freely all over the world. The explanations they usually get are too impersonal and foreign, in their language and nature, to really convince and reassure the masses of the people. The way is thus left open for the Communist propaganda agent to misinterpret and distort.

There are two general types of people who are qualified for this work of being "missionaries of democracy and Americanism" in foreign countries. There are the nationals of those countries, who have spent many years in America, have become naturalized citizens, have a knowledge of English and have not forgotten their own native language. They must be familiar with the philosophy of democracy, and also know the psychology and present day attitudes of their mother country. Then there are Americans who have spent many years in a foreign country, as teachers, missionaries, business agents, or diplomatic representatives, and who have a wide circle of friends among the nationals of the country who know and trust them. There are undoubtedly persons of both the above mentioned types who are available, and who would be glad to serve America and world democracy by going to the countries where they are known and where they would be welcomed.

In Asia at this time such people are desperately needed to prevent the rest of that vast area from going the way of China, and to win China back from the Soviet orbit, which is still possible. Gen. William J. Donovan of OSS fame, who recently returned from a trip to southeast Asia and the Far East says, "Non-Communist Asiatics want to be on this country's side, but only if we are safe to be with, if we can be relied upon to stick with them when the going gets bad." The countries he mentions are Burma, India, Thailand, Indo-China, the Philippines, Formosa, Korea, Japan, but all countries outside the Iron Curtain might be included.

The only way that these countries can be convinced that we will stick with them "when the going gets bad," is by sending Americans to them who know the people and are trusted by them. To give economic, technical, and military assistance to these people without accompanying such assistance with an adequate staff of men who know and understand the people and are known and trusted by them is very likely to be an "operation rathole."

Preventing Dead-Enders

By Malvina Lindsay

Growing Surplus

EVERY DAY they touch our lives, these teen-agers out of school who are drifting from one dead-end job to another. They wait on us at counters, carry out our dishes, deliver our parcels. To us they are digits—we never guess the dreams they are carrying around, never sense the frustrations and fears that are consuming them.

We see them today, they are gone tomorrow. For untrained and uneducated, weak in responsibility, often shiftless in work habits, they hover on the ragged edge of unemployment. Many are job floaters. Increasing numbers are joining the ranks of the chronically unemployed.

Now as unemployment rises throughout the country the younger teen-agers are pushed out by the older ones. These in turn give way to boys and girls who didn't quit high school, who stuck it out and got their diplomas.

The serious plight of these youngsters is depicted in the recently released study, "Hunting a Career," concerning out-of-school youth in Louisville, Ky., made by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and local agencies. Significantly a recent report has come from Frankfurt, Germany, warning that the half million out-of-school idle youth in western Germany is offering a "spawning ground for German militarism and nationalism."

THE LOUISVILLE, KY., study was made in 1947. Since then teen-age unemployment in the Nation has doubled. Even though the lure of easy money, which drew many teen-agers into the job market during the war boom, no longer exists, a high proportion of boys and girls continues to leave school to seek jobs.

The Louisville youths, regarded as typical of those throughout the country, quit school in large degree because they were bored and felt they weren't getting anywhere. A lesser number quit because of economic need. Others left for the lure of paychecks, some because of marriage, pregnancies, illness, family attitudes, behavior difficulties.

If this country is suddenly confronted with hordes of discontented, politically vulnerable, idle teen-agers it will not be for lack of warning. Educators and other experts on youth have been urging since the end of the war that some kind of safety bridge between school life and work life be created for the unskilled and untrained boys and girls.

An attempt to do something on a national scale has been begun in Congress through bills to revive the Civilian Conservation Corps on a smaller scale than in 1933 and under civilian control. Senator James E. Murray of Montana and Representative Reva Beck Bosone of Utah have introduced bills in Senate and House. Representative Bosone, who is chairman of a Subcommittee of the Public Lands Committee to which the House bill has been referred, hopes to begin hearings in a few weeks.

AS A FORMER Police Court judge and as an ardent conservationist of natural resources, Representative Bosone is interested in stopping the economic waste that idle youth and nature's destructive forces are causing the Nation. She points out that while a million youth between 16 and 24 look for work or idle on city streets there are vast areas that need reforestation, erosion control dams, protection from plant diseases and fire.

But communities need to do more to nip in the bud this development of floating and idle teen-agers. First, these boys and girls need to be kept in high school. Many educators admit the high school today is not holding the interest of its students or relating book study to life. But high school authorities can't move faster than their communities. More courses and free books and working materials are needed, says the Louisville study. These are responsibilities of school boards and taxpayers.

Second, teen-agers need more job counseling and personal guidance either through school or community services. Help is especially needed in the critical period when youth plunges into the strange workaday world not adequately prepared.

Over and over again in the Louisville study one comes across the pathetic, bewildered youngster who is wistfully harboring ambitions and seemingly surrounded by blank walls. A few evidence the stamina to become giant killers. But most of those depicted need education and training. Above all, they need personal interest and guidance. "Nobody paid any attention to me . . . nobody told me anything"—this is the basis of most of their plaints Impatient employers would say "They don't know what it's all about." Unless some way is found to tell them they will be an even greater liability in their adult ignorance.

Telephone Hogs

The story in your March 18 issue about the automatic cut-off on party line telephones after six minutes are up, should have been headed "Cure for Apoplexy."

If Toledo, Ohio, telephone users can be rid of party-line hogs, why can't sufferers in the Washington area be relieved of the pests? Believe me, it would be worth paying to have the cut-off installed.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

It's Up To Us

FRANKFURT, Germany.—German nationalism is a recommended study, for those who think the United States can safely dodge or escape from our heavy responsibilities in the postwar world. The old poison can flood Germany again, this time in the appalling form of a drive for a German-Soviet alliance "ueber alles." But this disaster can be prevented by bold and far-sighted American action. As usual, it's up to us.

Thus far, it must be added, a highly exaggerated picture of the revival of German nationalism has been presented to the American public from certain sources. On balance, as of today, there is rather less political nastiness in Germany than in the United States.

The Bundedoag — the new German parliament at Bonn—has its lunatic right-wing fringe, but these men are far less powerful than our own McKellars, McCarrans and McCarthys. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's Secretary of the Interior has staffed his ministry exclusively with purified former Nazis, but he has, on the whole, a less pernicious influence than the President's pet isolationist-reactionary, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer.

AMONG German big businessmen, who are remarkably like American big businessmen both in technical enterprise and a tendency to political unwisdom, there are some who are backing right-wing nationalist demagogues. But we too have our Sewell Averys and Colonel McCormicks, with their old fondness for former Senator Curly Brooks. Finally, the Bruderschaft, ostensibly an innocent veterans pension lobby, in fact is the front for a potentially sinister nationalist secret society, the Bund. But as yet the Bund is no more important than the Silver Shirts used to be.

As yet, in fact, the Germans deserve credit for their postwar achievement, instead of denunciation for their sins. Immense economic problems remain to be solved, but by hard work, the western Germans have gone far towards rebuilding their ruined country. Great political difficulties remain to be overcome, yet the Bonn government, as it stands today, is a pretty decent, healthy, middle-of-the-road government.

Furthermore, where the lesson of the first war hardly touched Germany, the far more bitter and severe lesson of the second war has sunk deeply in. If Germany could be left to herself, one could rather confidently count on her continuous development in the sound direction already taken. Unfortunately, however, Germany is being continuously subjected to the most ruthless external pressures, all calculated to warp and maim German political development. Herein is the real nationalist danger.

The pressures may easily be itemized. The Soviet sphere has poured into western Germany a flood of nine million refugees and expellees. Hence there are two million unemployed and misery is widespread. Since these unfortunates have seen quite enough Communists, their despair tends to benefit the extreme right. This is all too likely to show up this spring in the provincial elections in lower Saxony and Schleswig-Holstein, where refugees and expellees are heavily concentrated.

SECOND, the French, suffering from a natural security neurosis, have followed and are following a German policy which is more instinctive than logical. The French behavior over the Saar, the French impulse to prolong Germany's semicolonial status, even the viceregal doings of some of the French representatives in Germany, are all humanly understandable. But it is also true that the effect of the French security neurosis is to encourage an answering nationalist neurosis among the Germans.

Third, even in the American High Commission, great numbers of silly officials have a peculiar tendency to try to act as the nursery governess of the Bonn regime. In the face of venomously unfair criticism, American High Commissioner John J. McCloy has wisely taken the position that every new government must learn and grow by its own mistakes. Yet despite McCloy's best efforts, the governess-like behavior of the occupying powers has already had visible demoralizing effects at Bonn.

Finally, and infinitely most important of all, there is the Soviet pressure, now beginning to take the form of terror tactics. Eventually, if countermeasures are not taken, disillusionment with the Western allies and the deep, ever-present fear of Soviet aggression will destroy the new German political life and drive the Germans into the Kremlin's arms.

It's up to us in Germany, because we alone can take the only possible countermeasures. We alone can press forward with High Commissioner McCloy's proposal for fitting Germany into a strong European union, which is the only practical solution of all these different problems, political, economic, strategic and bureaucratic. It is time to stop talking about "the revival of German nationalism" and start doing something about the disease of which this nationalism is only a symptom.

'Social Lobby' Stumps Experts; They Admit Law Is Inadequate

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The question of what to do about Washington's "social lobby" yesterday stumped four experts summoned to tell Congress what is wrong with the present lobby law.

The issue of the "social lobby" was raised at a hearing of the House Select Committee on Lobbying Activities by Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio), who said it had been especially active recently in behalf of certain legislation.

Brown's reference was not made clear at the hearing, but it is understood he referred to the social activities of some foreign embassies in connection with ECA legislation.

Brown facetiously suggested that "maybe we should give these social lobbyists a special flag and insist it be raised at every party when they are going to do a little lobbying" for or against some bill before Congress.

The Ohio Republican tossed his question in at the end of an academic discussion of the faults of the present lobby law, and the four experts had little opportunity to present their views on the "social lobby" phase of the problem.

The four experts were: Dr. Edgar Lane, instructor in politics, Princeton University; Dr. Belle Zeller, professor of political science, Brooklyn College, N. Y.; Dr. George Galloway, senior specialist in American Government for the Legislative Reference Service, Library of Congress, and Dr. W. Brooke Graves, specialist in American Government and Public Administration for the Legislative Reference Service.

Three of the four experts agreed that the present law is "indefinite, ambiguous and filled with uncertainties." The fourth member of the panel, Dr. Galloway, who aided in drafting the present law, unhappily conceded that it needs revision. He said there are three or four lobbyists in Washington to every Congressman, and warned that their pressure groups, unless controlled, may tear our society apart.

Post-war Washington, he said, has become "a bustling mecca for all manner of national and international lobbyists whose number was estimated to range between 1500 and 2000.

Alaska's Defenses

By Marquis Childs

Danger Point In Economics

A DECISION has been taken by the Joint Chiefs of Staff which illustrates all the problems of the defense establishment in relation to that much-debated word, economy. Military installations of the United States in the Aleutian Islands off Alaska are, with one or two exceptions to be abandoned.

This is certain to cause both public and bureaucratic clamor. The decision was taken with a full realization of the risks involved, including the risk of public controversy.

The Aleutian chain extends for about 900 miles into the North Pacific. The islands are, for the most part, barren and fog-shrouded. The most important base to be given up is on Shimya, which is one of the few in the outer chain that is so flat planes can come in for a landing over water without difficulty.

Northwest Airlines uses Shimya as a base on the route to Japan. If this stop is abandoned, Northwest in all probability will have to change to a route on which another line is already operating. The Civil Aeronautics Board is expected to protest the abandonment of Shimya.

During World War II the Navy developed at Adak in the Aleutian chain a fairly large base. According to present plan, this will be maintained as a naval base, if only on a stand-by basis.

In the lengthy debate by the Joint Chiefs the decision on the Aleutians was based finally on the following reasoning. Possession of the outer Aleutians is of little value militarily either to the United States or to its potenial enemy, the Soviet Union. The islands are extremely difficult to supply and the persistent fog greatly reduces their value as operational air bases.

THE JCS were fully aware of the public reaction should the islands be taken by the Russians in the event of war. An immediate demand would arise that they be retaken. The JCS would resist that demand on the ground that they would be more of a liability than an asset to the enemy.

In World War II United States troops recaptured Attu and Kiska in the Aleutian chain from the Japs. The assault operations were badly bungled and unnecesarily costly.

As to the savings, one estimate is as high as 30 million dollars. This is believed, however, to include savings to be made on the mainland of Alaska as well as in the island chain. The defense line for the mainland is based on Fairbanks and Anchorage in the belief that the wild and almost empty terrain to the west would be little use to an invader.

Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska has publicly expressed his deep concern over the safety of Alaska, suggesting as others have that it might become the Pearl Harbor of another war. Total request in the 1951 budget for Alaskan defenses was 137 million dollars. House economizers have cut this to 96 million dollars. Gruening believes that not less than a billion dollars should be spent on Alaska's defenses during the coming fiscal year.

GRUENING is an ardent advocate of Statehood for the Territory, believing that only in this way can Alaska obtain funds sufficient for its defenses. The House already has approved a Statehood bill and a Senate committee is expected to start hearings. Certain Senators have been using delaying tactics to prevent a vote on Statehood for both Alaska and Hawaii.

This is, of course, a political question with which the Joint Chiefs cannot concern themselves. On a related issue they are conducting a debate with the Bureau of the Budget.

The JCS has asked for 100 million dollars for housing desperately needed for troops, in Alaska. Present facilities are woefully inadequate for the approximately 8000 stationed there and an expansion program is essential to take care of the 25,000 now planned for defense of the Anchorage-Fairbanks line.

The Budget Bureau has suggested that only 75 million dollars of this could at the most be spent in one fiscal year. The JCS argue that construction must be speeded up and the full amount spent in a 12-month period if Alaskan defenses are to be put on a stable basis.

A somewhat similar argument is going on over whether 50 million dollars or 35 million dollars can be spent in one year for construction of the radar warning network around North America. The network is also vital to Alaskan defenses.

The outsider has no means of judging the merits of these individual arguments. But the belief is growing that when economies originally made by military men themselves are compounded first by committees of Congress and then by the House and Senate, the danger line has in fact been reached or passed.

BENEFITS FROM WATERWAYS

How the Money Has Been Spent

The total amount spent by the Army Engineers for waterway improvements since the first expenditure in 1822, 128 years ago, is approximately $3,300,000,000. What has the money been spent for?

First, for the development and maintenance of the great seaports of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Charleston, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Mobile, New Orleans, Beaumont, Texas City, Port Arthur, Galveston, Houston, Corpus Christi, San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle, and many smaller ports handling a tremendous tonnage in the aggregate. Waterway improvements are vital to the life of the nation during peace or war. Of 95 cities with populations greater than 100,000, 62 are on harbors and navigable channels improved by the Federal Government.

Second, for the development of the Great Lakes Waterway System, incomparable in all the world, with its harbors, locks and channels. The major port cities are Duluth, Superior, Two Harbors, Marquette, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, Erie and Buffalo. The Great Lakes Waterway System can easily be called the lifeline of America.

Third, for the construction of an intercoastal waterway system, stretching along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts from Boston, Mass., to the Mexican border, more than 2600 miles. With the exception of the canal across New Jersey and Florida, this great waterway will soon be complete in its early stages. In time it will be one of the most valuable sheltered waterways in all the world. With feeder channels, its potentialities are unbounded. The Gulf section, already of inestimable value, grows in importance yearly. Of 36 American sea coast ports handling more than 3,000,000 tons in 1947, nine ports along the Gulf Coast handled 157,720,364 tons with an average of more than 17,000,000 tons per port.

Fourth, the development of the Mississippi, Ohio, Illinois, Monongahela, Allegheny, Hudson, Delaware, Cape Fear, Tennessee, Santee, Savannah, St. Johns, Alabama, Tombigbee, Black Warrior, Pearl White, Calcasieu, Neches, Missouri, San Joaquin, Sacramento, Columbia and other smaller streams. They are arteries of commerce playing a growing and important part in the commercial and industrial life of the nation.

What other expenditure of $3,300,000,000 has meant so much to America!

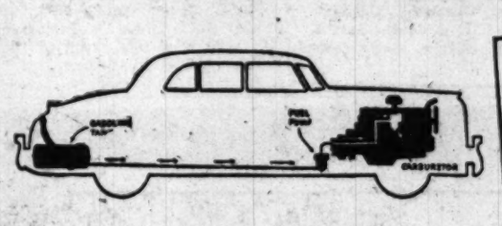
SINCLAIR SCOOPS 'EM ALL WITH THE BIGGEST GASOLINE NEWS IN YEARS

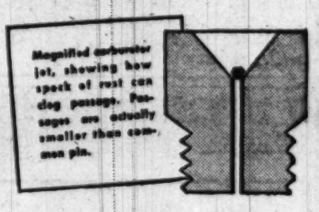
Miracle ANTI-RUST Chemical Blended Into Power-Packed Sinclair Gasolines

Today ordinary gasoline has become old-fashioned. Today your Sinclair Dealer offers you POWER-PACKED Gasolines with an amazing EXTRA VALUE—a new chemical ingredient that solves the problem of rust and corrosion in your gasoline tank and fuel system. It's RD-119, a product of Sinclair Research.

Water forms regularly by condensation in every car's gasoline tank — causes rust and corrosion throughout whole fuel system when you use ordinary gasoline.

RD-119 Stops Damaging Rust and Corrosion In Your Gasoline Tank and Fuel System





Magnified carburetor jet, showing how speck of rust can clog passage. Passages are actually smaller than common pin.

RD-119 coats the inside of your gasoline tank and fuel system with an invisible, water-proof film. It stops rust and corrosion that damage your gasoline tank, fuel pump carburetor—clog strainers and carburetor jets—cost you money in wasted gasoline and repairs.

Get POWER-PACKED Performance PLUS ANTI-RUST Protection at no extra cost. Use new Anti-Rust Sinclair H-C or Sinclair Ethyl Gasoline regularly.

Kerr Natural Gas Bill Would Exempt A Monopoly From Control, Rennies Say

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

TODAY the Senate will vote on the Kerr bill to exempt independent gas producers —that is, those not affiliated with interstate pipelines — from Federal price regulation. A similar measure has already passed the House.

Opponents of the bill say it would add hundreds of millions of dollars a year to the consumer's gas bill. Senator Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, himself an independent gas producer, retorts that independents have never been regulated, and that his bill would merely continue this hands-off policy.

Eighty-six percent of the Nation's gas reserves are controlled by the so-called independent producers. Independents are simply gas companies which do not operate their own pipelines; the list includes Phillips Petroleum, Humble (Standard Oil of N. J.), Magnolia (Socony-Vacuum), Stanolind (Standard Oil of Indiana), Gulf, Tidewater, Sun Oil, Conoco, Sinclair, Texaco, Shell and Cities Service. Though there are 2300 independent producers, 10 companies in 1947 sold half of the gas piped out of Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Under the Natural Gas Act of 1938, the Federal Power Commission has regulated gas pipelines and producers affiliated with them, but has never set prices for independent producers selling at "arm's length" to interstate pipelines. In fact, the FPC's Order 139 of August 7, 1947, specifically disclaimed any intention of doing so.

This does not mean that the FPC could not regulate prices. The Supreme Court has ruled that States have no jurisdiction over the price of gas in interstate commerce, but has clearly indicated that the Federal Government does.

By 1948, as more and more Northern cities were joined by pipeline to gas fields, prices were rising so rapidly that a majority of the commission decided some regulation would be necessary. The Kerr bill, by denying the right to fix gas prices, would in effect create a no man's land between Federal and State authority in which neither would have jurisdiction over the price of this natural resource.

GAS AND OIL producers think natural gas is much underpriced. They point out that for the heat it gives, gas is only a third as expensive as bituminous coal and a fifth as expensive as fuel oil.

It has been said that there are two reasons for everything: a good reason, and the real reason. Let us consider first the good reasons for raising the price of gas.

The producers argue that present low prices discourage exploration for new gas reserves, and encourage such wasteful practices as burning the gas which is a by-product of oil production. However, gas exploration is merely a by-product of the search for oil, and the rapid growth in proved gas reserves pretty well explodes that argument. As for waste of gas, that is already being remedied by legislation and by the recent price rises which have taken the price per thousand cubic feet from less than 5 cents in 1947 to as high as 11 cents in 1950.

According to the gas companies, the price of natural gas should be "all that the traffic will bear." In the words of President Vernon F. Taylor of Peerless Oil & Gas Co., gas at the wellhead is worth "what it could be sold for in the western Pennsylvania industrial area, less what it would cost to get it there."

The real reason for the Kerr bill is that producers would like to profit from the growing demand for gas, without fear of regulation by the Federal Government.

If prices remain free to rise, it is entirely probable that gas will eventually cost more than coal, since it is cleaner and more convenient. It is unlikely, however, to rise above the price of fuel oil.

IN DEFENDING his bill, Senator Kerr has said that long-term contracts and competition among independent producers would prevent unreasonable increases in the price of gas.

Nevertheless, contracts have not prevented a rapid rise in the last three years, and competition is simply no factor in the gas picture.

A pipeline joins a city with a certain field, or perhaps two or three fields. The producers in those fields are in fact in a monopoly selling position with regard to the pipeline and the city which buys the gas. Once the pipeline is laid, it cannot go elsewhere for gas if the price seems unreasonable.

All other stages of this continuous monopoly are regulated: the pipeline is controlled by the Federal Government, and the city gas company by a public utilities commission. But this control becomes a mockery if the field itself cannot be regulated.

As Chief Justice Vinson said in the interstate case of 1947, "unreasonable charges exacted at this stage of the interstate movement become perpetuated in large part in fixed items of costs which must be covered by rates charged subsequent purchasers of the gas . . ."

The Kerr bill, in our opinion, is a bad bill not because it would raise the price of gas but because it would exempt from regulatory control what is in fact a natural monopoly at all stages of production and distribution.

Gas is both cheaper and cleaner than other fuels. It seems far better to give the benefit to 40 million consumers, and not to a handful of producers who by virtue of a natural monopoly are in a position to exact high prices. This is not a question of economics, it is a question of equity.

The Gallup Poll

Question of War in 5 Years Finds Public Opinion Divided

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Mrach 28—Some of the public agitation for re-defining American foreign policy—especially where Russia is concerned—undoubtedly stems from widespread public fear that another war is in the offing.

Of course no one, not even the military experts, can tell what is ahead. But there is considerable gloom over the future among the general public.

A survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion finds that among people expressing an opinion on the likelihood of war nearly one-half think the United States will find itself in another war within the next five years.

Here are the survey results:

"Do you think the United States will find itself in another war within, say, the next FIVE years?"

War in 5 years	41%
No war	42
No opinion	17
	100%

Voters who think another war is in the making may prove to be entirely wrong, but the fact that they feel this way may have an important bearing on their attitude toward other public questions, such as the State Department's handling of the cold war both in Europe and in Asia, the size of the defense budget and other matters.

War fears also explain why so many Americans think another effort should be made to reach an agreement with Russia about atom bombs.

A recent institute survey found that while most voters do not expect success from such a meeting, they think the effort should be made, on the chance that something of value will come out of the meeting.

Besides the college-trained group, young people as a whole are more optimistic about keeping peace than older people. Here is the vote by age, and by education.

WAR IN 5 YEARS

BY AGE:	21-29 Years	30-49 Years	50 yrs. & over
War	36%	38%	47%
No war	48	45	34
No opinion	16	17	19
	100%	100%	100%

BY EDUCATION:	College	High Sch'l	Grade Sch'l
War	27%	37%	48%
No war	60	48	32
No opinion	13	15	20
	100%	100%	100%

All voters who said they think war is coming were asked:

"Who do you think will be responsible for starting the war?"

Seven out of every 10 (72 percent) said Russia, 10 percent said the United States and the rest of those with opinions named other European and Asiatic countries or political factions.

On the Town

THE man who caricatured President and Mrs. Roosevelt and made them like it is coming back to Washington this week. Dean Murphy, mimic extraordinary, will open Friday at the Old New Orleans. Members of the old Roosevelt circle who delighted in his characterizations at the White House years ago will be there to greet him.

The Old New Orleans show will be the biggest it's had. Los Chicanos, the fiery Chilean family dance team, are being held over. Haryl Harpa's rhumba band and Singer Marna Paige are still there. And downstairs in the Sazarac Room, Les Williams and Bob Simpson's band are playing as usual.

The star of the group, Dean Murphy, is also one of the youngest—33. But by 1945 he had 22 White House performances to his credit. Just a few weeks ago he was up to his old tricks. Appearing on Eleanor Roosevelt's television show, he aped her gestures, voice and mannerisms. And had her chuckling mirthfully throughout.

Murphy has been a busy man. He spent three years in movies, making "Broadway Rhythm," "Meet the People," "God Is My Copilot." He appeared at New York's Paramount Theater a record total of 56 weeks in five years.

The radio programs "Screen Test" and "Take Three" were also his stamping grounds. In television, the Milton Berle, Ed Sullivan and Kyle McDonald shows were all scenes of his humor. And just to complete his schedule, he finished his work last year for a Doctor of Laws degree from the University of Miami.

Ramey Tells Of Love for Slain Wife

A District Court jury today may receive the second-degree murder case against Frederick (Buck) Ramey, 22, accused of killing his 20-year-old wife, Maytriss, with a Japanese bayonet.

Ramey took the stand before Judge James W. Morris yesterday and professed his love for the late Mrs. Ramey. The defendant asserted that he did not know that she was on the other side of the bathroom door through which he thrust the bayonet that pierced her back.

Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin has charged that Ramey was guilty of "wanton recklessness" in the death. Defense Attorney Louis Jongbloet calls it "death by misadventure."

Ramey was discharged from the Army in January after a series of absences without leave. On February 7 the wife was killed during a party celebarting her twentieth birthday.

As Ramey testified, his two infant children chattered in the courtroom.

He did not explain why he put the bayonet on the rifle during the evening, but said he did not intend to harm his wife.

He asserted that they had been arguing and that she had gone into the bathroom which he said was locked.

He testified that he wanted to make a "racket" so that his wife would leave the bathroom at their apartment, 744 6th st. se.

Prior to his testimony, his confession to police was read. In this paper he said that he was "playing wise guy and smart" when he hit at the door.

"Rather than hurt her, I would have killed myself instead," he said.

Racket Inquiry Funds Asked

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday a proposed investigation of rackets will not be any "witch hunt" but a serious search for ways to stop crime.

In a statement filed for the Congressional Record, Kefauver urged his Senate colleagues to approve quickly a resolution to provide $50,000 for a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee inquiry.

Kefauver, author of the resolution, is expected to head the subcommittee.

"Those who expect a sensational witch hunt of this proposed investigation will be sadly disappointed, so far as I am personally concerned," Kefauver said.

"Those who may anticipate political consideration or a lot of notoriety from this inquiry will likewise be sadly disappointed."

He added that he hopes a "serious study of the Nation-wide aspects of crime will lead us to a constructive conclusion regarding the adequacy or inadequacy of existing Federal statutes relating to crime in interstate commerce."

More Miles per Hour
—More Hours per Day!

We are not talking here about excessive speed. Sensible people, regardless of the power they have at their command, obey the laws of the highway.

We are talking, rather, about distance—about the miles you can cover at the wheel of a 1950 Cadillac—entirely within the sane and legal limits.

First, let's consider an hour . . .

You settle yourself comfortably into the deep-cushioned seat, touch the soft-throated engine into action—and you're off on that wonderful journey you've so eagerly awaited. Within a matter of minutes, you begin to understand what we mean.

When the light turns green, your rightful place in the traffic line is definitely assured. You take easy and confident advantage of every opening that presents itself. On the hills and grades, you merely give the engine a little more throttle—and float on up without the slightest loss of speed.

Braking is so certain, steering so easy, power so abundant—that you move instinctively ahead at every opportunity. And at the end of an hour, you can scarcely believe the odometer.

Did we say an hour? It seems little more than half that time! You're so relaxed and at ease that the hours go by—and the hours go by—and not until the sun shows red in the west do you realize that you've been sitting behind the wheel for a much longer time than you'd planned on driving today.

And how wonderful you feel! Both you and your passengers are carefree and happy as you decide to call it a day. Maybe just a little bit hungry—because you probably forgot to stop for lunch!

And where did you get to? Well, most owners assert that it's a good one hundred miles beyond their normal expectation.

Better come in and see about this. You'll need only an hour at the wheel—because an hour will show you what a day would be like.

Gas Company Net Up 39% On Cold Snap

By S. Oliver Goodman

Consolidated net income of Washington Gas Light Co. and subsidiaries spurted 39 percent in February on cooler weather.

Net last month was $558,627 as compared with $400,724 in February, 1949, the company reported. This brought income for the first two months to $1,027,438, a gain of $213,776 over the corresponding period last year.

At the annual meeting of stockholders Monday, President Everett J. Boothby said that earnings for the 12 months ended February 28 were equal to $2.03 a common share. This compared with $1.45 a share in the previous 12 months.

Abnormally warm weather in the early part of 1949 decreased income for the calendar year by $200,000 and gross revenue by $800,000, Boothby added. January and the first half of February this year were also unseasonably warm but the weather "reversed" in mid-February and the firm's sales picked up sharply.

Continued inclement weather during most of March should result in a further rise in the net income for the 12 months ended March 31, Boothby said.

Active meters in the District of Columbia increased 1747 in the past 12 months to a total of 174,989 at the end of February.

COST STUDY: The Alexandria, Va., plant of Shell Oil Co. is being used to test new methods of cutting distribution costs for petroleum products. Man hours, clerical procedures, warehousing, routing and dispatching of trucks, safety and physical appearance of plant facilities are being closely analyzed, according to Stokes Tomlin, distribution engineer for Shell who arrived here yesterday to review progress in the new research program. The local study is being supervised by D. R. Myers, Shell's Washington area manager, and N. M. Barrett, Alexandria plant superintendent.

FORECAST: Rail freight shipments in the Atlantic States area will be 1.4 per cent greater in the second quarter than in the same 1949 period. This was predicted yesterday by the Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board. The area covers most of New York State, New Jersey, Delaware, eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. Actual carloadings in last year's second quarter in the area were 972,832 cars.

EARNINGS: Standard Oil Co. of California reported net income of $137,856,477 or $10.10 a share for 1949, compared with $161,491,932 or $11.83 a share in 1948. Other earnings statements:

American Woolen Orders Rise Sharply

Springfield, Mass., March 28 (AP).—January and February business of the American Woolen Co. was up quite a bit over that of the same period a year ago, Moses Pendleton, president, said today.

New orders in the first two months of 1950 totaled 25 million dollars, Pendleton told the annual meeting, compared with seven million dollars in the same two months of 1949.

Unfilled orders as of March 21 totaled 36 million dolars, compared with 28 million dollars to 29 million dollars o nthe corresponding date a year ago.

New York Cotton

New York, March 28 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 45 cents a bale higher to 20 cents lower today in slow trading. The feature of the market was the continued liquidation of the old crop deliveries against purchases of the new crop months.

Woman Charged In G-Girl Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

MRS. DARTHA FULTON, a stocky woman taxi driver with dyed red hair, was seized in Roanoke, Va., yesterday and charged with murdering lovely blonde Alice Marie Taylor, 24, in what was described as "an attempted abortion." Miss Taylor's bruised body was found Friday in a small ravine on Brush Mountain, 40 miles from Roanoke

Stassen Lists 4 'Spearheads To Socialism'

Boca Raton, Fla., March 28 (AP). Academic freedom is not to be taken as a license for treason, says Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania.

In an address before the thirty-eighth annual convention of the American Drug Manufacturers Association here last night, Stassen said every time in history an effort was made to create a "loafer's paradise, it ends up at a dictator's elbow."

He listed what he termed "four spearheads of danger moving down the road to the type of socialism that Britain has adopted."

The Brannan plan; proposals for nationalization of medicine similar to the one in Great Britain; Federal aid to local school districts; and the tax structure.

The idea that progress for human welfare is opposed to human enterprise is "confused thinking," he said. Individual economy is essential for social security and opportunity is vital to grind out special gains.

Stassen said of England that never before have the people been promised more and yet never before have people felt less secure.

He predicted that the English people will reverse their trend and said it may take several elections but they perhaps will end up with a coalition government.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 28 (AP).—Feed grains carried a steady tone at the Board of Trade today, but wheat and soybeans were irregular during the greater part of the session.

New crop deliveries in wheat held fairly steady but the nearby deliveries were inclined to be sluggish. Advices from Kansas City said that the cash basis there was easier, and there appeared to be little commercial buying.

At the finish, wheat was 1¾ higher to ½ lower; corn was ⅛ to 1⅜ higher; oats were ¼ to ¾ higher; rye was ¾ to 2 cents lower; soybeans were ¼ higher to ¾ lower, and lard was 2 to 20 cents a hundredweight lower.

D. C. Clergymen To See Special Showing of Film

Protestant and Roman Catholic clergymen will atend a special showing of "The Pilgrimage Play" Thursday at 8 p. m. in the Commerce Department auditorium.

The film, based on a play presented each year in the Hollywood Bowl, will be shown to the public three times on Wednesday, April 5, at Constitution Hall.

Funds raised at the public showing will be divided among 10 institutions in Greater Washington. They are Gallinger, Children's, Providence, Freedmen's and St. Elizabeths Hospitals, the Industrial Home School, Industrial Home School Annex, Receiving Home for Boys, Receiving Home for Girls, and the National Training School for Boys and Girls.

Legion Blasted On Hoover Report At AVC Meeting

The American Legion was blasted from two quarters last night at the meeting of the Evans F. Carlson chapter of the American Veterans Committee.

R. L. McCormick, research director of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, charged that the Legion's "sanhedrin," or ruling body, had refused to indorse the Hoover Report "without going into it fully."

Joseph Clorety, jr., national executive secretary of AVC, said the Legion "carried out its policy of power, patronage and plunder in denouncing the Hoover Report."

Active Club to Meet

The National Capital Active Club, affiliated with the World Council of Young Men's Service Clubs, will hold a luncheon meeting today at 12 noon in the Burlington Hotel. Membership is limited to business and professional men under 35 and is by invitation.

Voice of the Turtle Blends With Whir of Lawnmowers

The Weather Bureau said it regretfully: It will turn cooler today. The afternoon's top will be about 60 degrees.

But yesterday it was spring, late spring. It was 77 degrees at 4:10 p. m.; the sun was warm, and the voice of the turtle was heard in our land.

Downtown, the lawn in front of the Treasury Building was given its first mowing of 1950. A radio-appliance store set up a television display reading, "Get Ready Now for Baseball's Opening Day in Washington."

The pace of shoppers along the streets was slower. A few buds opened on a tulip magnolia tree on the White House grounds.

The parks that dot and space the city were filled all day—elderly people in the morning, Government workers at lunchtime, parents and offspring all day.

Only the cherry trees remained reluctant.

"Don't think there's a chance of them blooming before Easter," reported Ed Kelly, special assistant to the superintendent of the National Capital Park Service.

Star magnolias, he said, are blooming nicely; outdoor jonquils doing just fine, and there's no complaints about forsythia.

But with the Weather Bureau's extended forecast calling for normal temperatures — about 58 — through Friday morning, the cherry trees will stay unblossomed through the Cherry Blossom Festival Saturday and Sunday—"as if you kept them in an icebox," Kelly said.

This has brought about a state of affairs where the festival is importing—actually importing, like coals to Newcastle—two live, blossoming cherry trees for a dinner dance and reception Friday night.

Kelly's one encouraging word was that the unusually mild winter hasn't affected the trees, one way or another.

March wasn't as kind elsewhere in the Nation as it was in Washington. A vast storm system struck the Midwest, bringing blizzards to South Dakota and heavy rains to Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan.

The storm will bring Canadian air masses here to mix with yesterday's balmy air from Texas.

The immediate result, besides the drop in temperature, will be cloudy skies and windy conditions here.

Yesterday's 77-degree high came nowhere near setting a record. The hottest for March 28 was an 85 recorded in 1945, while the low mark came in 1894—21 degrees.

One of the day's phenomena was that it sent shoppers on a hunt for garden tools and outdoor accessories. Which embarrassed one Washington department store.

It hasn't converted its home furnishing display to spring yet. It's still featuring fireplaces.

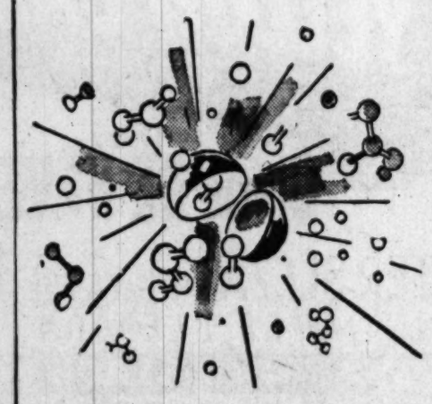
The most powerful gasoline your car can use!

Yes, many of today's engines have been stepped-up . . . they call for more powerful gasoline! Now Shell gives you the most powerful gasoline your car can use—Shell Premium—it's "activated."

Actually, Shell splits molecules to get more power for today's more powerful engines. So you get a gasoline that's "activated"!

No wonder Shell is winning more new customers every day. Get a tankful of "activated" Shell Premium today. Your Shell Dealer is the man to see.



Activation makes the difference

Shell scientists using the finest available crude, activate the molecules by splitting and rearranging them according to Shell's formula for a perfectly balanced gasoline. The result—Shell Premium, the most powerful gasoline your car can use.

One on the Aisle—

'Othello' Sellout At College Park

By Richard L. Coe

COLLEGE PARK, the no longer country-like seat of the University of Maryland, has its own "South Pacific." And, of all things, it is Shakespeare's "Othello."

The University's 10,000 students are all entitled to a view of the University Theater's major productions, but the theater, seating 418, was wiped clean of seats within an hour or so after the "Othello" box office opened for a week's run.

Under Dr. Ray Ehrensberger, the director, the theater staff has worked up quite a reputation in recent years, so it's likely the collegiate audience probably could fill the house for three weeks of the Shakespearean jealousy tragedy.

The production is fortunate in having an able cast, but its most striking characteristic is the stage pictures formed by Sayre Harris' settings, costumes and lighting. At times the stage resembles the rich, muted colors of a Titian painting, an effect especially fitting for the Venetian and Cypriot setting. Director Elmer D. Barraclough evidently has taken Harris' shrewd design into his plotting, and the teamwork of the two is the most distinguishing feature of an ambitious production.

The drama of the tragically suspicious Moor, his chaste wife and the villainous Iago has been edited into two parts, with the latter the more effective. There is a rather precious beginning (a pointless dance) before the verse gets under way, and some of the efforts to make the drama flow quickly into individual scenes are forced. But the story line is clearly defined and one can learn much about the play watching this performance.

Of the players, the veteran Ken Calfee is a fortunate choice for the title role. The man speaks well and plays with dignity. Bernard Shur's Iago begins on so high a pitch that he allows himself little development, and while he moves well, his overplaying is out of the picture. Pernell Roberts is the hapless Cassio, a forthright performance. James Coyne's Duke of Venice has the required dignity.

Lou Piccoli is the Desdemona, and while I never have seen this pale lady satisfactorily played, she does well enough. Sue Levin is more fortunate with the more vivid role of Emilia and Beverlee Smith is Bianca.

As a novelty unique in college theatricals, the entire understudy complement will play the special matinee on Sunday.

SARAH TRUAX, that beloved player of a past generation who has come back with an enchanting book of reminiscences, "A Woman of Parts," is in town at the Wardman Park, and if we can settle the lively lady down for a spell, we'll have a chat with her. . . . Cornelia Otis Skinner, Jane Cowl and Frances Starr are a few of the people who've told affectionate tales about her through the years.

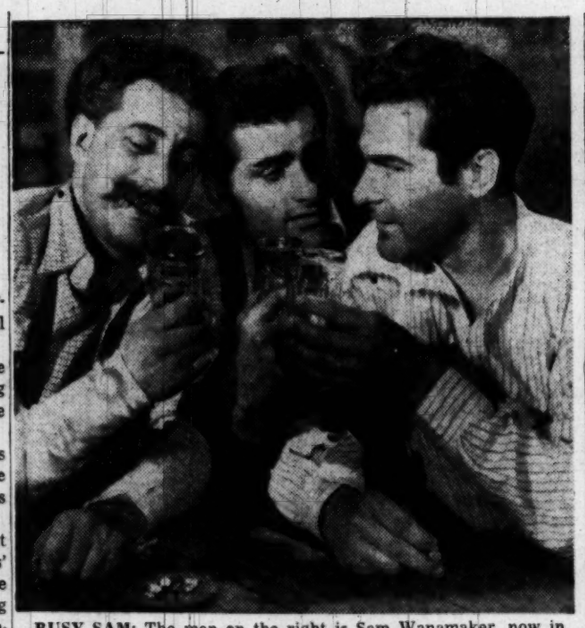
NEW YORK is about to get its first "theater-in-the-round," a remarkable first considering how this has caught on from Seattle to Jacksonville . . . Derrick Lynn-Thomas, who appeared here last summer with Vicki Cummings at Meridian Hill, and David Heilweil, once of New Stages and "The Respectful Prostitute," are the boys behind the overdue venture . . . They've latched on to a part of the Edison Hotel, in the Times Square area, and hope to open May 23 under a revival-cum-big-stars policy . . . Looks like a sure bet for shareholders.

PAUL CLAUDEL, that beloved diplomat who represented his France here 20 years ago after a career which started as vice consul in New York during the '90s, adds another honor to his distinguished life . . . His poetic drama, "L'Annonce Faite a Marie," will be played at the Vatican in the presence of His Holiness during April . . . M. Claudel will help Jacques Hebertot prepare the Vatican's Hall of the Benedictions for the spectacle . . . The work is one of many he has contributed to Catholic literature.

THE EASTERN SHORE'S Charlotte Hall Military Academy has many a theater-minded cadet, you may have noticed in weekend audiences around town . . . Saturday, the school's Players will present a comedy of their own, "The Milky Way," which Danny Kaye did in the movies as "The Kid From Brooklyn" . . . In the cast will be two Washington area lads, Charles Mackert of College Park, and Tom White of Colmar Manor . . . Cadet Tom Vincent has the title role and Jane Sothoron, wife of the commandant, plays the feminine lead . . . Cadet Richard Colabella also passes along word that the school's orchestra and glee club are combining for a Sunday night stage bill in the Hughesville Theater.

FRONT ROYAL'S daily dispatch about Bing Crosby Day adds another Saturday event, the first ball game of the season, with the University of Virginia team meeting the Front Royal Club in the Bing Crosby Stadium . . . Bing will be on hand for the world premiere of his new "Riding High," which will be the Eastern Week attraction at the Warner.

IN BRIEF: Co-Adapter Robert Fitzgerald was in last night's audience at Catholic University for "Oedipus Rex." . . . Theodore P. Smith's "Boys Without Pennies" opened last night at Howard University's campus theater, the group's first student original play, with Stanley Paige, Theodore Lowe and Mary Nelson in the leads. . . . Tonight brings a new Yiddish film to the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts., at 8:30. . . . Matinee today at the Gayety for "Goodbye, My Fancy."



BUSY SAM: The man on the right is Sam Wanamaker, now in town on double duty as star and director for the Gayety's current play, "Goodbye, My Fancy." Here you see him in the leading role of "Salt to the Devil," which will open Sam Roth's new Plaza Theater on New York ave. next month. With him, in the usual order for this screen version of Pietro di Donato's "Christ in Concrete," are Charles Goldner and Bonar Colleano, Vivien Leigh's leading man in London's "A Streetcar Named Desire"

Dance Instructor Awarded $11,000 For Car Injuries

Mrs. Margaret M. Goldstein, 40, of 2928 Macomb st. nw., yesterday was awarded $11,000 by a District Court jury for traffic injuries that hampered her career as a dance instructor.

She suffered a broken foot on October 31, 1947, when the car in which she was a passenger struck a parked auto in the 2800 block of Calvert st. nw. The car in which Mrs. Goldstein rode was owned by defendant Jeremiah H. Salus, and was driven by codefendant Arnold R. Salus, of 2700 Woodley pl. nw.

Before the jury in Judge Jennings Bailey's courtroom, Mrs. Goldstein's attorney, Joseph D. Bulman argued that his client, because of her injuries could no longer teach such dances as the rumba and the samba.

C. N. Dorsey Convicted Of Traffic Homicide

Calvin N. Dorsey, 20, of Oxon Hill, Md., was convicted yesterday in Municipal Court of negligent homicide in the traffic death December 30, 1949, of Henry Meeks, 58, of 206 5th st. se.

The accident occurred at 5th and K sts. ne., when, according to Joseph Sommer, assistant United States attorney, an automobile which Dorsey drove struck Meeks.

CCNY Beats Bradley, 71-68, For 2d National Title

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 28.—Bucky Harris isn't speaking to his left fielder, Gil Coan. In a sense it's a deliberate snub. But lest you assume there is dissension in the Washington camp, all the facts should be made clear.

Harris is content to watch Coan hit .300 in the exhibition games, hit the longest balls in camp and pile up those home runs of which he has hit five in the Grapefruit League. "I'm willing to keep mum all season at this rate," says Harris.

POVICH

His silence in Coan's direction was preconceived when Harris marshaled his squad here; it is part of a plan. "I'm telling Coan nothing," he says, "I'm showing him nothing and it's working out fine. All I ask is that it continue."

Making a big leaguer out of Coan, the former Southern Association batting champion who flopped three times under Managers Ossie Bluege and Joe Kuhel, is Harris' chief mission in the Washington camp. "It's a selfish job I'm doing," Harris admits. "If Coan makes good for me we'll have a whale of a ball player."

ON THE FIGURES, Harris isn't working with much. Coan hit a dismal .217 last season. He never has been able to fathom big league pitching. "But I'll never understand why," says Harris. "Look at him—that fine batting stroke, and all that power. The day that he gets squared away will be a happy one for this club."

As Harris deduced it, most of Coan's troubles stem from a lack of assurance when he goes to the plate. "Too many persons connected with the Washington club have been telling him too much, and, as I understand it, the fellow has been flustered ever since he came into the majors. He needs some self-assurance more than anything else.

"Coan's kind of case comes up only because a player wants to make good so badly, and tries so hard and gets moody at his failures. Maybe my psychology will work. He won't hear any complaints from me when he strikes out. I want to show him I can take his failures in stride, and that he should. Nobody bats 1.000 in this league."

Coan's a happy kid in the Washington camp, liking the whole idea of getting out from under the managerial line of fire. Lack of confidence, at least in the spring games, isn't one of his weaknesses. In fact, his new attitude borders on cocksureness. Harris likes that. "I'm even rooting for Coan to get cocky, then we'll have a great ball player," says Bucky.

Harris visualizes Coan as something more than just a good outfielder and a .300 hitter. "There isn't anybody in the league with a higher potential than Coan," he says. "People remember that he's the fastest man in the league, and that he's a great drag bunter and is rarely doubled up, but they forget one thing: he weighs 192 pounds, he's a big man, and he can knock that ball out of the lot."

Feeling much the same way about Coan back in the early forties, the Chicago Cubs offered Clark Griffith $100,000 for the fellow in the days when that was still a stupendous sum to pay for a ball player. Griffith hasn't come close to getting his $100,000 worth out of Coan, but he envisions a handsome return this season under Harris' ministrations.

"I HIRED HARRIS to come back as manager because he's the best man I know to work with young ball players," said Griffith last winter, "and we have a young team. If anybody can make a good man out of Coan, he can, and that's what I'm asking him to do this year. I won't admit I'm wrong on Coan until Harris is through with him."

Earlier in the training season, Harris took his first step to instill some confidence in Coan. He called the young man aside and told him "You're this team's regular left fielder, so don't have any worries about it. Just get in there and play the way I know you can, and you'll be a big help to me."

The plan has worked so admirably in the spring training stages that presumably Harris wasn't going to vary it in any detail. But he is varying it right now. "This thing is working out so well that I know what Coan can do with a little self-confidence. So he isn't my regular left fielder all the time. I'm benching him against left-handed pitchers until he gets that real self-assurance that base hits bring. That's when he'll be ready to hit all kinds of pitching.

Nats Blow 9-0 Lead to Birmingham Lose, 12-11

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 28.—Howard (Diz) Sutherland, the Nats' rookie left hander from Charlotte, pitched himself a return ticket today. He threw two home run balls with the bases full and the Nats took a 12-11 beating from Birmingham of the Southern Association.

It was called by rain at the end of six innings, but the Nats had little to gain nevertheless. They were well stigmatized by the fact that they couldn't hold a 9-0 lead against the Red Sox farmhands.

Young Sutherland didn't put in his appearance until the next-to-last inning, but that was too early, it could be observed. Birmingham had begun pecking away at Sid Hudson's nine-run lead and had two runs across and the bases full with none out when Sutherland took over.

The first two acts of Hudson's successor were to walk two men and force two more runs home. His next was just when the Barons ordered, a fat pitch to Center Fielder Dick Burgett who knocked it over the left field wall for a four-run homer.

In the sixth, Sutherland was still wild, walked two and had the bases full with two out when, with the Barons needing one run to tie the game, they got four. They got it on Ed Lavigne's basesfull homer over the left field wall.

Trailing, 12-9, the Nats had only a two-run reply in their own sixth. Dente walked, and Noren scored him with a double to center. A fly ball by Stewart scored Noren from third, but Mele flied out and Vollmer struck out and the umpires said too much rain was falling.

Hudson's exit from the game in the fifth was hastened by a beaning incident in which he conked Danny Ryan on the head with a curve ball. Ryan was struck on the right temple and was taken from Tinker Field in an ambulance, but his injury was reported not serious.

Obviously, unsettled, Hudson was combed for consecutive singles by Kielty and Harrington before he turned the situation over to Sutherland.

Until his fifth inning misfortunes, Hudson staged the finest pitching show of the spring for the Nats. He held the Barons to two hits and shut them out in the first four innings, walking nobody. Lou Dammon greeted him with a homer to start the fifth and De Pietro followed with a single before Ryan was beaned.

The Nats amassed 14 hits to 9 for Birmingham and were apparently on their way to winning in a breeze. They got four runs in the first inning after Yost opened up with a triple. Vollmer lifted a homer over the left field wall with one on.

They picked up another run on doubles by Noren and Mele in the third, and in the fourth they made it 9-0 with the help of Center Fielder Burgett's muff of Dente's fly. Okrie doubled and Yost, Noren and Mele packed singles into the inning.

That was the 9-to-0 lead they couldn't hold.

Later in the fifth inning, Webster scored, but it wasn't enough, and Dartmouth won, 13-5. (Story on Page 19)

To Settle Havana Situation

Bluege Meets With Cubans Again, This Time in Miami

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 28 (AP).—Havana's muddled baseball situation may be clarified at a conference to be held in Miami tomorrow, Florida International League President Phil O'Connell said today.

O'Connell will confer with Merito Acosta and Joe Cambria, heads of rival factions seeking control of the Havana Class B team, and their attorneys.

Also attending the conference, to be held at Miami Stadium, will be Ossie Bluege, representing the Washington Nats, owners of the Havana franchise.

Last time Bluege met with Acosta, it was in Havana and the Cuban police were called in to escort him to the airport.

O'Connell said he hopes an understanding will be reached to assure Havana of putting a representative team on the field for the league's opening next Monday night. The Cubans, who won the pennant each year since the league was organized in 1946, are scheduled to play in Lakeland opening night.

Mikan Leads Lakers to Title

Fort Wayne, Ind., March 28 (AP). George Mikan scored 37 points tonight as the Minneapolis Lakers won the National Basketball Association Central Division final playoffs with an 89-82 victory over Fort Wayne. Freddy Schaus scored 33 points for Fort Wayne.

Handball Event Reaches Finals

The doubles teams of Gus Goldstein and Irv Ornstein, and Jack Schwartz and Jack Levin gained the final round of the D. C. AAU handball tournament yesterday at the Jewish Community Center.

Goldstein and Ornstein defeated Hy Goldberg and Dave Kaplan, 21-15, 21-3, while Schwartz and Levin won from Sam Papandrew and George Schneider, 21-11, 21-16.

The two winners meet for the championship at 6:30 tomorrow evening.

Braves Hand Yanks Fifth Loss in Row

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10 (AP).—The New York Yankees suffered their fifth straight defeat in the grapefruit belt today as they bowed to the Boston Braves, 9 to 5.

For the first time this spring Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee Clipper, played a full nine innings. His hitless performance didn't help the Yanks' cause.

Vic Raschi, making his second start of the exhibition campaign, hurled five innings and was clubbed for five runs. He gave up three in the first on a pass and doubles by Bob Addis, Bob Elliott and Henry Ertman.

Lapchick Blames Refs For Loss, Gets Sour Grapes From Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., March 28 (AP). The Syracuse Nationals' basketball team today sent a basket of "sour" grapes to Joe Lapchick, New York Knickerbocker coach, who was reported miffed over the refereeing in the game between the two teams Sunday.

Art Deutsch, Nats' general manager, said he had telegraphed the grapes to Lapchick "in view of his unwillingness to admit that his team had been outplayed" in the National Basketball Association play-off game here. Syracuse won, 91 to 83.

Lapchck was reported as being riled over the refereeing turned in by Ed Boyle and Arnie Heft.

Indians Beat Giants, 4-2

Phoenix, Ariz., March 28 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians pushed over three runs in the last two innings here today to defeat the New York Giants, 4 to 2.

The Indians had trouble throughout the first six frames, unable to fathom the two-hit shutout pitching of Montia Kennedy but they put together a walk, a wild pitch and a booming double by Ray Boooe to break the ice in the seventh.

Badly Cut Mager Sinks Clincher in Last Seconds

New York, March 28 (AP).—Norman Mager, wearing an ugly 2-inch gash over his left eye, scored a driving layup goal in the last 10 seconds tonight to give City College of New York a 71-68 victory over Bradley for the NCAA championship and basketball's first "grand slam."

The climactic goal coming with 18,000 Madison Square fans on their tiptoes and roaring at full-lung strength, gave a story-book finish to one of the most amazing sagas of college basketball.

Unranked and unnoticed, Nat Holman's Cinderella team came out of nowhere two weeks ago to start mowing down the Nation's top quintets with unbelievable regularity.

Ten days ago they whipped this same Bradley team, No. 1 in the Nation's rankings, for the National Invitation crown, 69-61. No team before has ever been able to cram the two big national tournaments titles into a single season.

Three minutes before the end of the first half Mager, a rangy substitute, was sent sprawling to the floor after a head-on collision with Aaron Preece of Bradley.

Preece rose to his feet and was able to continue after some on-the-spot attention. But Mager, a 2-inch gash pouring blood over his left eye, had to be led to the locker room for medical attention.

There he had five stitches taken in the wound. He reported for action at the start of the second half and the crowd gave him a loud tribute.

But none so loud as when he stole the ball in the fading seconds and tore down the floor to cash in the final bucket.

At that time the score was 69-68, CCNY leading, and Bradley a growing threat to snatch the verdict out of the fire in a bold finish. The Peoria, Ill., team had overcome a 10-point deficit in the last 10 minutes.

City College apparently had clinched things without a doubt with less than a minute left, but Bradley wasn't ready to give up the ghost just yet, as they trailed, 69-64.

Little Gene Melchiorre, a thorn in the CCNY hide in both tournaments, came through with two quick driving layups to haul his mates to within a point of the front-running Beavers. Then Mager made himself a hero.

North Carolina State overcame a sluggish start to roll over Baylor, 53 to 41, in the consolation game.

Soccer Players Never Kick At Ole Olsen's—Too Busy Eating

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

PLAYERS IN the Suburban County Soccer League actually enjoy driving 120 miles to and from Charles County, Md., and losing a match. And no wonder the soccermen get a boot out of it, what with Hughesville Hotel Owner Ole Olsen tossing a sumptuous smorgasbord for the winning and losing team . . . A day after they had tendered a farewell party to Casey Jones, assistant to the publisher who is leaving for Syracuse, a group of Washington Post employes returned from the Laurel opening cursing their luck. Not one played the Jones hunch and this is what they missed: Jones Reward, with a $33.20 mutuel won the first race; Mrs. W. E. Jones' Glory Be paid $16.60 winning the second race and W. I. Jones' Helen Dear returned $8.60, capturing the third race . . . Mike Palm, former New York Giants and Georgetown backfield coach, has been approached by Penn State representatives who wanted to know if he was interested in becoming head football coach at his alma mater . . . "I've given up coaching for cooking," said Mike, who operates a restaurant on Capitol Hill . . .

COACH RED AUERBACH was so confident Anderson would eliminate his Tri-City Blackhawks in the first round of the pro basketball playoffs he made plans to be in New York five days after the series started. His team did nothing to interfere with his plans . . . When Senor Baldomera Merito Acosta tried to dispossess Clark Griffith from control of the Nats-owned Havana baseball team, it was a case of a man biting the hand that fed him. Griffith staked the one-time outfielder to 70 shares of the team only to have Acosta attempt to dislodge him a few years later . . .

YOU CAN'T blame Navy football players if they don't attempt to horse around with Eddie Erdelatz, their new head coach. He was boxing coach at St. Mary's College, his alma mater, and later at San Francisco University.

Brothers, Williams Fight Monday

Elkins Brothers, local heavyweight, was signed last night for a scheduled 10-round battle with Vern Williams, hard-hitting New Yorker, at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Williams has won 19 out of 22 professional starts while drawing one and losing only two. He holds decisions over Billy Fox, Curt Kennedy, Phil Johnson and Jimmy Hooper.

Baseball Club Loses Field to Outdoor Movie

Stamford, Conn., March 28 (AP). The movies today pushed professional baseball out of Stamford, where it has been losing money for three years.

The request of an unidentified syndicate for a lease on Mitchell Field, to convert it into a motion picture drive-in theater, left the Class B Colonial League team no place to play.

Aging Chisox Ace Loses Shortstop Job

Luke Appling Gets to First Base Easy Way, But He Isn't Exactly Enthusiastic About It

(The following story on Luke Appling's first try at first base after a record 2198 games at shortstop for the White Sox was made available to the Associated Press by the Chicago Sun-Times.)

By John C. Hoffman

Los Angeles, March 28 (AP).—There were smiling skies for old Luke Appling's debut at first base, but no sunshine in the ageless shortstop's heart. This was the second noble experiment as prescribed by Honest John Onslow, the White Sox headmaster, as a solution to the desperate need for a first baseman.

LUKE APPLING

Bill Ahlstrom, the sporting goods salesman, was there when old Luke came in with the other players to dress for the two-hour workout at Wrigley Field. There were other people, too, and they stood around as if at a wake.

Old Luke stood by as Ahlstrom opened the big black suitcase. There were gloves, shoes and other paraphernalia and there on top of the heap were three first baseman's mitts. One was a George Sisler model, another a Rudy York contraption and still another bore the autograph of Les Fleming.

Appling reached for the Sisler model, tried his right hand in the mitt and it didn't fit.

"Hey." He said, in his Gawgia drawl. "Ain't you-all got one that fits?"

He tossed the mitt back into the suitcase. "It goes on your left hand," said Ahlstrom. "Remember, you throw with your right hand."

Old Luke tried to grin, but his heart wasn't in it. "If I'm goin' to be a first baseman," he said, "I'm going to be a left-handed one."

He tried on the Rudy York model, tossed it back. "Why didn't you bring one that's big enough," he said. "My little daughter's got a better glove than that."

He left the salesman standing there and went in to dress. Old Luke was now a first baseman without a mitt.

In the locker room, he slid into his uniform . . . Silently brooding over the strange turn of affairs. He knew now that Chico Carrasquel, the sprightly Venezuelan, had taken his job.

"Come here, Luke" said Manager Onslow, from a nearby locker. "If you don't like this, don't hesitate to say so."

Old Luke didn't say so. Instead, he accepted a George Sisler model from Ahlstrom. Forced it on his left hand and went out into the sunshine. Outside, Carrasquel was practicing a shortstop. Luke tossed a few with Catcher Bill Salkeld.

At first base, old Luke posed for pictures. He posed again with Herman Reich, Gordon Goldsberry and Charley Kress. Then the others left and Luke took a few throws from Cass Michaels, who was playing second base. A couple of Cass' throws were wide and old Luke moved quickly to get them, but they got away.

"Move around, No. 4," yelled Michaels. "If I throw them all too good you might get the habit of just standing there. You'll have to hustle if you're going to be a first baseman."

It isn't easy to grow old.

Longshots Run Wild at Laurel With $82, $67, $49 Winners

Bill Bennings Says:

At Laurel.

Dear Folks:

Trainer Jimmy McGee has a rare distinction, having saddled two straight track record makers on consecutive racing days. He sent Jones Reward four and a half furlongs in :58 2/5 on Saturday and then sent B Battery the same distance in :53 4-5 on Monday. The gimmick is that the abbreviated sprint route is being used here for the first time in history. Per capita betting here last Saturday was only $44.60 with a crowd of 21,681. On Monday, the gathering of 9328 averaged $62.50 per person. Henry Horkheimer is the latest owner to come through with a clever name for a horse. His filly, By Bliss Me Out of Careful Diah, has been dubbed Gesundheit. Jockey Johnny Gilbert has been on the sick list. See you on the rail—BILL.

Choices Fail As Double Pays $782

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., March 28.—It was a case of tearing up the past performances and every man for himself at this race track today.

Figures, tip sheets, handicaps and the like were just so much rubbish as the shrieks of the longshot players making their kill filled the summer-like air. Chalk addicts were batting their heads against the clubhouse wall and gnawing on their programs before the card was three races old.

Amateur day it was at Laurel, and fitting, too, that a horse named Sandlot should win the race occupying the feature position. To the tune of a $49.60 mutuel, this son of Shut Out got home in the second division of the Mt. Vernon Purse.

Sandlot, last seen in action at Charles Town, showed no mercy on the big league favorite, Triple Hearts, running him into the ground to win by two lengths. In fact, the public choice had trouble lasting by a nose over Iron Pigeon for the place money.

43 Collect On Double

However, this race was only one stop on the monetary parade. The first half of the Mt. Vernon, better known as the third race, was a sizzling affair—a ding-dong battle between a longshot and the favorite. Came the photo and it showed Abbotstown the winner by a nose at a mountainous $67.80 mutuel. Indus, the big money carrier, was second with Gallant G.I. third.

But if you haven't looked at the results, you ain't seen nothing yet. For instance the program opened with a neat job by a 4-year-old named Handy Man. Those with a win ticket handy collected $82.80.

That wasn't all, because those who had him hooked up with Night March, a mere $27.20 shot, in the second race, collected a $782.80 daily double on the 10 and 5 combination. Forty-three $2 tickets were sold on the duo which was ignored in the $10 daily double ticket windows.

As the program progressed it appeared that the word had gotten out that the first favorite to win was going to be shot crossing the finish line.

Last Curtain Drops Out

Bugle was the favorite in the fourth and he blew as Just A Tiger gathered in the chief marbles at $6.80. The Bernadotte Stable entry of Viva Teddy and Walter's Boy proved ineffective in the sixth as Analii was the winner at $8.20.

Before the seventh race the wise guys tried to fool one another by not making a favorite. In fact, there were twin choices in Farm Maid and Lock Control both at 7-2. This made no difference because the winner was Battle Clamp at $17.80.

The eighth race favorite was aptly named Last Curtain. She finished third with Two Gs, a hunch if there ever was one, winning at $11.

As the crowd left the track, one favorite player said to another, "Wait until we get to town, pal. I'll treat you to an overdose of sleeping pills."

3 Recreation Basketball Titles at Stake Tonight

Non-Resident Fees Boosted In Maryland

Annapolis, Md., March 28 (AP).—Governor Lane today signed laws hiking nonresident hunting and fishing licenses in Maryland to prevent an influx of out-of-town sportsmen.

An annual nonresident fishing license will cost $10 and a hunter's license $20 after June 1. This will bring Maryland fees into line with Pennsylvania and Virginia charges.

Washingtonians, particularly, have flocked to Maryland with rod and gun because of cheaper licenses here in the past, Game and Inland Fish Director Ernest A. Vaughn explained.

Maryland has been charging $5.50 for a nonresident fishing license

The nonresident hunting license has cost $15.50.

Big Green Tees Off On Palmer

Dartmouth University's touring baseball team opened American University's season on a sour note yesterday, thumping the Eagles, 13-5, at the American U. field.

Dartmouth pounded Starter Bill Palmer for nine hits and eight runs in 2 2/3 innings while Palmer was giving up six walks to lock American out of the game before it got started.

The Eagles entertain M. I. T. tomorrow at 2 p. m.

4 Md. Trotting Tracks May Shift Races

Governor Lane yesterday signed a bill assuring Maryland a full allotment of harness racing days. It permits emergency transfer of meetings among the four trotting tracks.

Dick Hutchinson, jr., general manager of the new $1,200,000 Baltimore Raceway, insisted yesterday that the Route 40 plant will be ready for its July 14 opening.

Hutchison previously scotched a report that the Baltimore track wouldn't be completed in time and would hold its meeting at Laurel Raceway where he's president and general manager.

Hutchison said yesterday, "I fully expect Baltimore Raceway to be ready a full month before its opening date.

"The original harness racing bill in Maryland specified that no more than 20 nights could be held in any one county in a year. All the tracks were interested in having it changed for protection in case of fire or any other catastrophe. It's similar to the fiat track transfer provision."

Terps Even 2-Game Set With Rutgers

Maryland University evened its two-day series with Rutgers yesterday by taking a 10-7 victory over the visitors. Rutgers beat the Terps, 10-0, Monday.

The Terps sent nine men to the plate in the eighth, scoring four runs to overcome a 7-6 deficit. Ed Toner's single drove in the tying and winning runs in that inning.

House Committee Cut In State Dept. Budget May Result in Layoffs

The State Department is having budget troubles along with its many other headaches.

It will have to slap a "freeze" on its personnel or else make a small layoff if its budget now before the House is approved.

The House Appropriations Committee cut State's budget for salaries and expenses by $1,431,000 or $852,100 under what it has for this year. The reduction means the department must absorb the pay raise cost and then some, that the present expansion of the Voice of America would be slowed down to a walk, and that few vacancies here would be filled.

In addition, the department wouldn't have the money to replace a number of alien employes overseas with Americans, to train intermediate grade Foreign Service employes, or to pay part of the cost of official entertainment. The department requested $325,000 for entertainment. The committee allowed it $25,000. It also slashed funds for the office of former Senator Warren R. Austin, the United States representative to the U. N.

AGRICULTURE: In its Production and Marketing Administration, these top-level changes have been ordered: H. C. Albin has been appointed assistant to the marketing administrator; Jim Hoofnagle has been moved into his job as assistant for food distribution, and Robert Beach succeeds Hoofnagle as budget director . . . At Forest Service, Charles L. Tebbe will be transfered here on July 1 to be general inspector of the Washington office. He is the Forest chief at Missoula, Mont.

FCC: At Federal Communications, an office of formal hearing assistants has been set up with Parker D. Hancock as chief, and composed of Sylvan D. Kessler and Herbert Sharfman as attorney-advisers; Horace E. Stone, electronic adviser, and Charles S. Borum, accountant. . . . CIVIL SERVICE: The President will extend the retirement of Kenneth C. Vipond for at least six months. The able assistant executive director of the commission, Vipond will be 70 in a short time.

CAPITOL HILL: A bill that would give Federal employes the right to bargain with agency heads will be considered today by a House Civil Service Subcommittee headed by Representative Davis (D., Ga.). It is being sponsored by Representative Rhodes (D., Pa.). The Davis subcommittee approved it last year but the full committee sent the bill back to it.

An attempt is being made in the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Comittee to further water down the bill to give postal veterans credit toward automatic promotions for time served in the armed forces. The Administration is opposed to the House-approved bill because of its huge cost.

On the other hand, committee members are trying to figure out some way of extending similar benefits to all World War II veterans in Government.

PEOPLE: Civil Service has ordered the Maritime Commission to restore Frank E. Hickey to his Grade 15 job. Hickey accused Maritime of violating the veterans' preference act in discharging him . . . Merlyn R. Crichfield of Treasury's Disbursement Bureau has been given a $275 cash award for an economy suggestion that will save more than $10,000 . . . Employes here who recently retired from Agriculture are: Eugene P. Brooks, Emmet Cary, Henry T. Converse, Frances Gray, Lilia M. Neuman and Florence Torrey Swanson.

NOTES: Pentagon parking is fouled up again. Employes who park there have been ordered to form car pools in order to get parking permits. Naturally, they don't like it. . . At State, cash awards have been given these employes for money-saving suggestions: George A. Pope, $275; Eugene L. Rzeczkowski, Harry E. Fisher, Lois C. Martin, and Robert L. Blair, $25 each; Arthur C. Harris, Blanche Blevins, Curtie Sue Hawes, Charmion Currey, Reginia M. Moore, Helen V. Riegger, Rachel J. Sbarra, Marian R. Solberg, Rosine Pilliod, Ray M. Warmkessel, and G. M. R. Dougall, $10 each. . .

Participated In Tax Forums, Striner Says

Baltimore, Md., March 28 (Spl.). Benjamin Striner, Washington business and civic leader, today admitted at his trial on tax-evasion charges that he took part in tax forums while he was president of a businessmen's federation, but declared the talks were only about the sales tax, his "pet peeve."

Striner, accused of attempting to evade $59,552 in income taxes, is on trial in Federal court before a jury and Chief Judge William C. Coleman. The case will go to the jury Wednesday morning.

The defendant admitted that he failed to report all of his income in his original returns for the years 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1945, but denied that the omissions were the result of a willful desire to evade.

Striner testified that after he was advised by the Government that his returns were erroneous, he employed a private accountant and subsequently paid substantially the amount claimed by the Government.

Striner admitted he was president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations of Washington, and that he had served in positions of leadership in other business and civic groups.

Mrs. Ernest Howard, of 1521 Monroe st. nw., Washington, testifying as a character witness, told the jury that she had frequent contacts with Striner in connection with her activities as a civic worker.

She testified that Striner is held in the "highest esteem by congressional and banking people" because of his work in helping to investigate the Community Chest of Washington.

Mrs. Howard further declared that Striner has shown "concern for his fellow-men," and suggested that he may have been lax in taking care of his own affairs because of that.

Striner admitted on cross-examination by Prosecutor Norman P. Ramsey, that he forgot to include about $3000 in rentals from one of his commercial investments on one return.

He contended he mortgaged or sold some commercial properties to pay his tax obligations.

The defendant further contended that he discovered after the accountant was employed that the gross receipts from his former pharmacy in the 2900 block Nichols ave. ne., were more than he figured.

Striner admitted he did not keep formal books for his drugstore business, and said returns were prepared from register readings, memoranda and estimates.

Morris Yarmack, identified as one of the purchasers of the drugstore in 1944, testified as a rebuttal witness for the Government that Stringer told him the business "ought to" take in a gross of about $300 to $350 daily.

Stringer, who is 41, lives at 7800 Orchid st. nw. He is accused of understating his net income in the four years in the amount of about $112,000.

Correction

In a report of the attempted income-tax evasion trial of Benjamin Striner in Baltimore, it was stated in The Washington Post Tuesday that Striner is president of the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations. Striner is not connected with the Northwest Council. He is president of the North Washington Council of Citizens Associations. The Post regrets the error.

Weed Elected By Montgomery P-TA Council

David L. Weed of Potomac last night was elected president of the Montgomery County P-TA Council in an election held at Takoma Park Junior High School.

Elected area vice presidents were Mrs. Aaron B. Nadel of Silver Spring, Mrs. Emerick Toth of Takoma Park, Mrs. Roland Green of Laytonville, Irwin Wensink of Chevy Chase, B. Z. Kile of Gaithersburg and Robert McClurkin of Rockville.

Mrs. Harold Boesch and Mrs. Robert Harvey, both of Kensington, were elected secretary and assistant secretary, respectively.

ABC Hears Protests on License Shift

A hearing protesting the transfer of a retail liquor license to a Brentwood Village drugstore continued for a second day before the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday. Final argument will be heard Monday at 2 p. m.

The board has been asked to switch a class A license from Executive Pharmacy, 1432 K st. nw., to Brentwood Drugs, 1301 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Owners of a liquor store in the same Rhode Island ave. block declared there wasn't room for two liquor stores. Others protested because children throng into the drugstore from a nearby theater. Daniel Witt, owner of Brentwood Pharmacy, said he intended to partition his store so the liquor would not be dispensed in the drugstore itself.

Fires Excite Takoma Park, Hyattsville

Multiple-alarm fires in nearby Maryland last night caused $15,000 damage to the music annex of Washington Missionary College in Takoma Park, and wrecked the second floor and attic of a Hyattsville home.

Causes of both fires were undetermined.

In the three-alarm Takoma Park blaze, six fire companies extinguished the flames in less than an hour. The fire broke out a few hours after a student recital.

The loss included several pianos. The blaze was discovered by a student, Robert Quade, who returned to the 2½-story structure to get a music book.

A thousand spectators were drawn to the scene and saw the flames break through the roof.

Two alarms were turned in for the Hyattsville fire at 4910 40th pl. It made homeless Mr. and Mrs. James Church, who occupy the second-story apartment, and the family of Dolph Davis. He owns the house, and lives on the first floor.

Mr. and Mrs. Church were not at home. Davis suffered singed eyebrows when he discovered the blaze and sent in the alarm.

Store Clerk Is Injured In Fall in Areaway

Walter H. Haerner, 40, a store clerk, suffered a possible fractured pelvis when he fell into an open areaway in front of 1012 H st. nw. last night.

Haerner, who gave his address as 5342 42d st. nw., was taken to Casualty Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger.

Drug Store Aide Robbed Going to Bank

Police were faced with a new wave of lawlessness yesterday as they counted a holdup accompanied by a shooting and two assault-robberies in little more than 12 hours.

Monday night two men—police believe they were either drunk or dope-crazed—kidnaped a cab driver, staged an $11 holdup, and after their escape shot the cab driver in the back and threw him into the street.

The cabbie, Leslie Smith, 31, of 128 F st. nw., was reported improved yesterday at Casualty Hospital after a successful operation to remove the slug that had lodged near his spine.

Less than four hours later, two other thugs invaded the room of Michael Hays, 75-year-old night watchman, at 400 5th st. nw., and beat and kicked him and slashed his hands. They robbed the elderly man of $100. Hays was admitted to Gallinger Hospital in "fair" condition.

At about 10:40 a. m. yesterday two youths attacked a drug store employe en route to the bank, struck him and robbed him of an envelope containing $311.

The messenger, Harold McDearmon, 25, of 1477 Newton st. nw., an employe of Simpson's drug store, 7th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., was carrying the money to a branch of the Hamilton National Bank, at 7th and N sts. nw. The two thugs attacked him in the 1300 block of 7th st. nw.

One was about 20, 6 feet tall, slender build, with very dark skin and wearing an Army combat jacket and dark-colored tam. The second youth, also about 20, was said to have medium brown skin, was about 5 feet 9, of medium build and was well dressed.

Mystery Cloaks Shooting Of Stroller Near Woods

Police yesterday were still investigating the mysterious shooting late Monday of a man strolling past a woods in the 4500 block of Livingston rd. se.

Norton H. Rhodes, 24, 168 Mississippi ave. se., grocery salesman, told police a man shouted at him as he walked by the woods and when he failed to respond, shot him. He is now at Casualty Hospital, in good condition, recovering from buckshot wounds.

Gas Station Attendant Burned in Explosion

A 33-year-old attendant at a service station, Wilson blvd. and Utah sts., Arlington, was burned on the arms and neck yesterday when the gas in a tank of a car he was working on "exploded."

The victim, Stewart Smith, of 3511 S. 7th st., Arlington, told Arlington hospital authorities he was draining water from the tank. He was treated for first and second degree burns.

Loved Myers, Nurse Says; Gives Story

Ruth Childs Tells At Abortion Trial Of What Happened In Her Apartment

A nurse formerly of Children's Hospital testified yesterday that she loved and lived with the married man now on trial for performing a fatal abortion in her apartment.

Miss Ruth E. Childs, 34, said that Ralph W. Myers had a key to her apartment at 1321 Fairmont st., nw., because "I trusted him, I loved him, and I didn't mind his having it.

"He told me I meant more to him than anything in the world," she testified.

Myers, a 44-year-old window shade salesman, is on trial in District Court, charged with performing a criminal abortion on Mrs. Nina Jean Campbell, 20-year-old mother of two children.

Suspended From Position

Mrs. Campbell's savagely beaten body was found January 5 in Miss Childs' apartment.

Miss Childs, a diminutive woman, just 5 feet tall, with graying hair and a pronounced limp, has been suspended from her position as the hospital's educational director.

Under direct examination by Prosecutor John C. Conliff, Miss Childs testified that on the night of January 4, Myers came to her apartment. "I was there alone and fixed dinner for him."

Mrs. Campbell Arrives

An hour later Mrs. Campbell and her 29-year-old aunt, Mrs. Peggy Earnshaw, arrived "unexpectedly," Miss Childs testified.

Two friends who were there left, and, Miss Childs said, she and Mrs. Earnshaw, Mrs. Campbell and Myers sat talking until about 9 p. m.

"Ralph asked me when I was going to stop yapping, and would Mrs. Earnshaw and myself like to take a walk," she testified.

"I asked did I have to go, and he said he could talk to her (Mrs. Campbell) better if we left. I trusted him and so we left.

Couldn't Get In

"Sometime before 11 p. m.," Miss Childs testified, she and Mrs. Earnshaw returned. "We knocked, and tried to get in, but the night latch was on. I called Ralph's name.

"I went immediately to the bed and Mrs. Campbell was lying on the bed on her back. Her slip was above her hips. She appeared to me to be dead. There were blue splotches on her neck. Ralph was standing there."

"Thought She Was Dead"

Early January 5, she said she talked to Myers on the telephone and "he told me he thought I was dead. He said 'there is a body in the apartment and I thought it was you.' I asked him who it was and he said he did not know. He said if it had been me it would have killed him."

Myers visited the hospital at noon, Miss Childs said, and "told me to tell that I had loaned the key to Mrs. Campbell and that I had met her at a New Year's Eve party.

"How could I?" Miss Childs testified she told Myers, "when I didn't even know who she was. I asked him what he had done and he said 'nothing; that she had had a heart attack and fell on her head.' She called police shortly before 3 p. m. January 5.

Under cross-examination by James J. Laughlin, defense attorney, Miss Childs said she met Myers three years ago.

"You two became very good friends, is that right?"

"Yes."

"As a matter of fact you two were intimate?"

"Yes," she said quietly.

Two witnesses preceded Miss Childs. William Campbell, brother of Mrs. Campbell's husband, and Police Pvt. John S. Trodden, jr., of the Tenth Precinct, corroborated earlier testimony by Mrs. Campbell's husband, Carlton, and Mrs. Earnshaw.

The trial, which has had a standing-room-only crowd since March 22, will be continued at 10 this morning.

3750 Perverts Hold U. S. Jobs in Capital, Senate Probers Say

Predict Check Will Uphold Estimate Of Police Made in Secret Hearings

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senators predicted last night the check they are making of Federal offices in Washington will more than bear out Metropolitan Police estimates of some 3750 perverts on Government payrolls here.

The intensive survey of agencies here is being conducted by a special two-man Senate subcommittee—Senators Lister Hill (D., Ala.) and Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.).

They were assigned as an emergency subcommittee of the 10-member Senate District Appropriations group to chart the next moves in the effort to rid the Government of sex perverts on the ground that the threat of blackmail makes them especially dangerous security risks.

The estimate of 3750 perverts in the Government service here was based on testimony given in a secret hearing last week by Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the Metropolitan Police vice squad.

Blick was asked to estimate the number of sex perverts in Washington. He fixed the figure, as a guess, at about 5000, and estimated that 75 percent were in the Government service.

Hill heads the District funds subcommittee.

Wherry is a member of the funds group, is also Republican floor leader in the Senate, and the one who took the initiative in calling for police testimony on the problem of perverts in Government service.

Secrecy Is Lifted

Assignment of Hill and Wherry to take up the security issue raised by Government employe perverts was disclosed in a sudden lifting of the secrecy wraps that had been placed around the meetings of the District funds group.

Members of the committee still declined to be quoted directly. But committee members of both parties said there was complete unanimity of opinion in the 10-member committee about the need to take immediate action to clean up the situation created by perverts in Government offices.

What to do has not been settled, members said. Hill and Wherry are conferring with top-level Federal agency officials to get recommendations.

Some of the Problems

These are some of the problems, it was explained:

1. No real liaison now exists—from agency to agency in the Federal Government, and from the Federal agencies to the local police—for keeping track of persons found or suspected to be perverts. The solution for this might be a law requiring a liaison system, or an executive order. It's not a problem for the FBI, but for the police.

2. Local laws make it easy for perverts to keep their records free of morals charges. Persons arrested post $25 or more collateral in a precinct on a disorderly conduct charge, and escape going to court. A stricter law requiring trial of cases is suggested.

3. Only four Metropolitan police in Blick's squad now are assigned to the problems represented by the estimated 5000 perverts in Washington. Assignment of more police is suggested.

The District Commissioners discussed matters relating to the Capitol inquiry into perverts during their meeting yesterday. Details were not disclosed.

A refusal at police headquarters yesterday to let a naval intelligence officer check applicants' names against the Metropolitan Police file of subversive persons led to a question whether the files were locked up. Blick said they were. Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett was asked about it and said he has a key.

Tamm Urges Marital Counsel To Cut High D. C. Divorce Rate

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Forty-six percent of the 6745 civil and criminal cases on the District Court docket today are Washington divorce cases, Judge Edward A. Tamm told the luncheon meeting of the District Junior Bar Association yesterday.

The court's startling divorce business was the judge's basis for a persuasive argument in favor of his plan for a Marital Affairs Counsel to streamline District Court divorce and custody actions.

The proposed marital counsel would have subpoena powers, take testimony under oath, collect and disburse all alimony payments, initiate prompt action against those delinquent in alimony payments and investigate cases involving custody of minor children.

The counsel's chief function, as outlined by Tamm yesterday would be to speed handling of cases and serve as clearing house for accurate information for both the court and attorneys.

The proposal, a modification of the Friend of Court procedure in Detroit, would require an act of Congress. It is now in bill form and will be considered in about 10 days by the District Bar Association before submission to Congress. The Bar's committee on domestic relations already has indorsed the idea in principle.

Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court sent Judge Tamm to Detroit last June to study the Detroit plan. Tamm has since drafted a report for study and discussion by the local bar.

Calling for machinery to step up slow-motion handling of domestic relations cases here, Tamm told the young lawyers: "Today we are driving a 1915 automobile in 1950 traffic."

He said the proposed marital affairs counsel's office envisions a staff of 13 or 14 persons, of whom 7 would be lawyers, the others accounting and clerical help.

At the outset, he said, the plan would cost about $42,000 annually, but predicted it soon would become self-supporting and eventually would be a huge money-saver to District taxpayers if it parallels what has happened in Detroit.

In that city, prompt follow-up on delinquent alimony payments and counseling by the court saved welfare authorities $1,339,517.40 in relief funds during the 1947-48 year, he told the group. "The plan has saved taxpayers more than three times its operating budget."

Several questions from the floor following the judge's talk centered on whether, under his proposal, payment and disbursement of alimony through the Marital Affairs Counsel would be mandatory.

Tamm said it would, but declined to say how individual judges would rule when a failure to work through the counsel was brought to the court's attention.

Judge Tamm disclosed another of his "pet projects" for the local courts: Payment of court-appointed attorneys at a fixed rate by the presiding judge. In Detroit, judges pay court-appointed lawyers from $5 to $25 an hour, he said, "and I believe the idea had a great deal of merit." Presently court-appointed attorneys here receive only what they are able to negotiate with their clients, usually $5 a case.

Mother Shot, Another Held In Dispute

A dispute between two young mothers, next-door neighbors in Suitland, Md., flared into violence last night. One was shot, the other charged with the shooting.

Prince Georges County police identified them as Mrs. Leah Tippitt, 25, of 4405 Summers rd., Suitland, and Mrs. Gloria Matthews, 23, of 4407 Summers rd.

Mrs. Tippitt was taken to Casualty Hospital with a bullet wound in her left forearm. Mrs. Matthews was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Mrs. Tippitt has three small children. Mrs. Matthews has two. Prince Georges police said Mrs. Tippitt didn't want the Matthews children playing at her house, and Mrs. Matthews felt the same way about the Tippitt children.

County Policeman Wilson J. Purdy said this is what happened:

When the Tippitt children came into her yard yesterday, Mrs. Matthews threw stones at them. When Mrs. Tippitt returned home at 6 p. m., she went to the Matthews' home and an argument started.

Mrs. Matthews went into her house, returned with a .38 caliber revolver and fired a shot at Mrs. Tippitt, who was about 60 feet away, according to the police account.

Mrs. Matthews was freed in $500 bond for a hearing April 7 in Upper Marlboro police court.

Dewey's Estate Willed to Son, Another Cut Off

The will of Commander Theodore G. Dewey, 91, who died here March 18, was filed yesterday in District Court, leaving virtually all the estate to one son, Edward B. Dewey, 2500 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Commander Dewey, a nephew of Admiral George Dewey, cut off his son, Theodore Macrae Dewey of Chevy Chase, Md., with $1 because of "unfilial" conduct and because of sums given to him previously, according to the testament.

Value of the estate will be presented to the court at a later date.

Tax Rate Rise Seen In Prince Georges

Despite a 25 million-dollar increase in taxable base, Prince Georges County may have to increase its tax rate.

Tentative budget figures released yesterday by the County Commissioners would require at least a $2.24 tax rate if the items are not pared from the record $4, 933,008 budget, which is $911,758 more than the current year's budget.

A public hearing on the proposed budget will be held April 12 at 10 a. m. in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro.

Highest item in the budget is a record school budget of $2,412,009 compared to two million dollars in the current year. Road construction will account for another $220,223, an increase of $83,646 more than this year. Payments on school bonds will total $595,094, an increase of $77,362.

Election expenses will be higher this year, the estimated $83,351 comparing to the $9000 in the present budget.

The County Engineer's office budget is estimated at $93,360 or an increase of $42,360 and the Health Department wil lreceive an increase of $14,704, bringing its budget to $61,904.

Police Department budget figures total $251,000 or an increase of $11,000 and the newly created Recreation Board is to spend $44,338 or $34,338 more than in this year's budget.

The Prince Georges County General Hospital is expected to require $49,996 or $19,996 more than this year because of an expansion program in the hospital and clinics. Operation of the fire control center will be $28,520 or $6479 more than this year.

Use of IBM machines will cost the county $19,100 or $12,000 more than this year.

Copies of the budget may be obtained from the office of Linden Briscoe, clerk to the County Commissioners, in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro.

In Prince Georges

Zoning Request Is Denied

A builder's request for permission to erect semi-detached houses on a large undeveloped plot in Prince Georges County was turned down yesterday by the Commissioners after witnesses declared that high density housing has overburdened the county school system and dislocated the tax structure.

The five Commissioners by unanimous vote refused to zone a 131-acre plot of land flanking East-West hgy. in the vicinity of Riggs and Sargeant rds. to permit construction of two family units.

T. Howard Duckett, attorney for the land owner, M. A. Mace, argued that the Commissioners had no right to take into consideration schools or highways in coming to a decision on the zoning of land.

Presents Charts

William R. Turner, president of the Chillum Civic Association, presented a series of charts to support his arguments that the Commissioners should "declare a moratorium on all further medium and high density construction."

He urged them to freeze zoning classifications and stop the issuance of permits for other than single detached homes.

"Ultimate solution" for the county's financial problems "may lie in the development of medium-class residential areas of a high type," he declared.

These districts would provide financial underpinning for the county school system and also attract the commerce and industry needed to "balance the tax picture," he said.

Bordeaux, France, March 28 (AP). A six-motored French seaplane being tested for freight service plunged into the sea today after a wing fell off. All 12 crew members were killed.

Prince Georges Schools See Fund Shortage

Prince Georges County school officials yesterday informed the county commissioners they will receive $120,000 less from the State equalization fund than had been expected.

Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart reported to the commissioners at their meeting in Upper Marlboro yesterday that he had not expected the 25-million-dollar increase in the assessable base of the county and that this would affect the equalization fund to the amount of $120,000.

The school board already had been urged to trim its budget by $200,000 before the new demand on county funds was discovered.

The commissioners will meet Friday with school officials and go over the school budget item by item in an effort to pare the school demands. Essential needs must be left but it is hoped that some less essential items may be found to be deleted.

The commissioners found themselves in a tilt with another State board yesterday. J. Milton Patterson, director, and two members of the State Welfare Board appeared to urge that the commissioners select either Granville Gude or Sidney Hollander to fill a year-old vacancy on the welfare board for the county. The commissioners insisted that they want to name Harry T. Jenkins of Suitland, a former member of the board who is not acceptable to the State board.

The two groups went into executive session and later anounced they will meet again in the near future. The commissioners contend they provide $110,000 annually for the welfare board and they want their own man to watch over the expenditures. The State group contends that Jenkins is hostile to the program.

1500 Attend Funeral Of Jacob Shenk

Harrisonburg, Va., March 28 (AP). More than 1500 persons attended funeral services here today for Jacob A. Shenk, prominent Mennonite churchman and poultry hatcheryman who was killed in a plane crash last Friday near Mountain City, Tenn.

Those attending filled and overflowed the auditorium at Eastern Mennonite College, which Shenk helped to construct a few years ago. Burial was in Lindale Mennonite Cemetery.

Dr. Voelker, Takoma Park Dentist, Dies

Dr. Voelker

Dr. Joseph William Voelker, 51, who practiced dentistry in Takoma Park for 26 years before his retirement in 1946, died of a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at Beal's Funeral Home, 4812 Georgia ave., with burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Dr. Voelker, who lived at 1300 Dale dr., Silver Spring, and had offices at 110 Willow ave., Takoma Park, had been a patient at the hospital since November, 1948.

He was born in the District and graduated from Central High School. He graduated in dentistry at the University of Maryland and studied, in addition, at the University of Pennsylvania.

A veteran of World War I service in the infantry, he was charter president of the Southern Dental Society, a member of the District of Columbia and Maryland Dental Societies, of the Brightwood Lodge of Masons, Takoma Park American Legion, Manor Country Club and Police Boys' Clubs.

He is survived by his widow, the former Mae Patten of Manassas, Va., and twin children, Joseph L. and Janet Lee Voelker, 6.

R. L. Quigley Dies at 83; D. C. Druggist

Richard Lucien Quigley, 83, for many years the owner of Quigley's Pharmacy at 21st and G sts. nw., died of a heart condition last night at George Washington University Hospital. He had been ill for about a week.

Quigley's has long been famous, a favorite dispensary for George Washington University students. Although Mr. Quigley retired from active participation in the pharmacy 12 years ago, he still owned the building in which it was located. He lived at 3415 34th st. nw.

A native of Martinsburg, W. Va., Mr. Quigley lived in Washington 65 years. He graduated in pharmacy from the old Columbia College, now George Washington University.

He was a life member of the American Pharmaceutical Association, a member of the Veterans Druggists Association, the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, and vice president of the Home Building Association.

On November 29, 1943, Mr. Quigley celebrated the golden anniversary of his wedding to Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter Quigley, who survives him.

Also surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Macnamee, of the home address, and two grandchildren, Mrs. Donald Pike, jr., and Richard E. Little, both of Boston.

Gen. Gaffney, Mentioned By Maj. Jordan, Dies

Augusta, Ga., March 28 (U.P.)—Brig. Gen. Dale B. Gaffney, 56, deputy commandant of Eglin (Fla.) Air Force Base, died at Oliver General Hospital here today after an illness of several weeks.

During the 1943-45 period he was in charge of ferrying airplanes to Soviet Russia. It was during that time, Former Maj. George Racey Jordan told a Congressional investigating committee, that secret equipment and atom bomb data was sent to Russia on ferry planes.

Gaffney said at the time that Jordan's charges were a surprise to him.

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah E. Sparto, 49, of Brandywine, Md., wife of James Sparto, a City Post Office guard, will be held today at 2 p. m. at Chambers Funeral Home, 517 11th st. se. Burial will follow in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. Sparto, a cancer victim, died Sunday at Providence Hospital. She was born in Abingdon, Va.

She is survived by her husband; a son, Elmer Rutledge, and two daughters, Mrs. Nora Lee Hillard and Mrs. Kathleen McCampbell, all of Knoxville, Tenn.

Bishop Russell Installed in Rites At Charleston, S. C.

Charleston, S. C., March 28 (AP). The Most Rev. John J. Russell was installed here today as the seventh Roman Catholic Bishop of the Charleston Diocese.

The ceremony was held at the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist. The Most Rev. Francis P. Keough, Archbishop of Baltimore, installed the bishop.

Among others taking part was Archbishop Patrick O'Boyle of Washington.

Bishop Russell entertained the clergy and lay friends at a dinner following the mass. In the afternoon he visited the Trappist Monastery at Mepkin Plantation, near Moncks Corner. The plantation is the former home of the Henry Luces.

Mrs. Junker Dies at 76 In Silver Spring

Mrs. Marie Barbara Junker, 76, Silver Spring resident since 1936 and widow of Richard F. Junker, former Internal Revenue Bureau official, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Betty Ruth McDevitt, 1320 Dale dr., Silver Spring.

Mrs. Junker

Mrs. Junker, who had been suffering from a heart ailment since last November, was found dead in her bed yesterday morning by Mrs. McDevitt, who is a correspondent for The Washington Post and reporter for the Maryland News.

A native of New York City, Mrs. Junker lived for many years at Rockville Center, Long Island, where both she and her husband were leaders in Republican politics.

After coming to Silver Spring following the death of her husband in 1936, she became affiliated with the Democratic Party and was active in the Silver Spring Woman's Democratic Club.

She also was a member of the Takoma Park Woman's Club and of the Sodality of St. Michael's Church, Silver Spring.

Besides Mrs. McDevitt, she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Arthur M. May, and a sister, Miss Kathryn Weil, both of Rockville Center, and a grandson, Ronald Francis McDevitt, of Silver Spring.

Mrs. Lauman Rites Thursday in Arlington

Miss Hanna Dies; Served U. S. Abroad

Miss Margaret M. Hanna, 77, first woman Foreign Service officer to serve overseas, died yesterday at Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, Rockville, Md.

Miss Hanna

Miss Hanna, who made her home with her brother-in-law, H. H. Martin, lived at 1529 Varnum st. nw. She had been in ill health for about one month.

At the time of her retirement in 1938, after 43 years of Government service, Miss Hanna was American consul in Geneva, Switzerland. She was the first woman transferred from the State Department to the Foreign Service.

Born in Ann Arbor, Mich., she lived in Salina, Kans., before coming to Washington with her family while in her teens.

In 1895 she went to work in the State Department and a year later became confidential secretary to Assistant Secretary Alvey A. Adee.

She was sent to Geneva as consul in 1937 after attending several international conferences as a United States representative.

Miss Hanna attended St. David's Episcopal Church, Macomb st. and Klingle rd. nw.

She is survived by a brother, Frank R. Hanna of Los Angeles; a sister, Mrs. W. L. Fairbanks of Tucson, Ariz.; two nieces and a nephew.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Land Survey Urged In Ark Dweller Case

By School Board

Arlington Enrollment Change Voted

Arlington school children may enter the first grade if they are six years old by September 30 in the year of enrollment, the school board decided last night.

Only exception will be made for the child who will be six by March 1 of the succeeding year, if he can pass a standard test, and has his parents' permission.

Action followed recent approval of the annual promotion system for the schools, replacing the semi-yearly system.

The school board voted also to inaugurate an ungraded primary system, beginning this fall.

The goal in three years will be the elimination of grades in the first three years of school. Children in the ungraded primary will be eligible for promotion to the fourth grade after two to four years of education experience.

In other action, Claude Richmond, principal of Washington-Lee High School since 1937, was named as principal of the million and one-half dollar Strafford Junior High School, to be finished this fall.

Health Center to Get Electrocardiograph

Donation of an electrocardiograph—which helps diagnose irregular heart action—by the Metropolitan Heart Guild to the District's Southwest Health Center was announced yesterday.

District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger said a plaque describing the gift will be unveiled today at 10 a. m. at the center, Delaware ave. and I st. sw.

Alexandria City Council was told last night a land survey will be needed to back up the city's charges of trespassing against seven river-front "ark dwellers."

City Attorney Floyd Williams told the Council that court action against the group has been held up until the city can establish more clearly ownership of property involved. Williams ordered warrants issued against the seven several weeks ago as part of a water-front "clean up" directed by the Council.

He was told last night to investigate facilities for clarifying the titles in question and to look into the cost. He will report back at the Council's next meeting in two weeks.

At last night's session, the council overrode the recommendation of both the City Planning Commission and the National Park Service in approving a rezoning which would permit operation of a gas station adjacent to the Mount Vernon blvd. The action was voted by a 6-1 margin, with Councilman R. Samuel Luckett dissenting.

City Manager W. Guy Ancell read letters from both the Planning Commission and the Park Service in which they objected to the rezoning on the grounds it would constitute a traffic hazard and would not be in keeping with "the memorial character" of the highway.

The proposed service station, to be operated by A. Slater Lamond, will be built on Slater's la. and will be separated from the highway by an 80-foot strip of parkland. Lamond, a former city councilman, is coowner of a clay products factory in Alexandria.

Guay Won't Appeal

Quebec City, March 28 (U.P.).—J. Albert Guay, sentenced to hang on June 23 for murdering his wife by time-bombing an airliner, said today he will not appeal his death sentence.

4 in Congress Ask School Aid

Four members of Congress yesterday told a House Education and Labor Subcommittee that Federal aid was badly needed to build schools in their States.

Representative Albert Rains (D., Ala.), author of a bill to allow the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make grants totaling 400 million dollars and loans of 400 million dollars to the States for elementary and secondary school buildings, as well as equipment, was the first witness. He said Alabama needs 178 million dollars for school construction.

Representative Thor C. Tollefson (R., Wash.) and Representative Hugh B. Mitchell (D., Wash.) put in a special plea for aid where the military establishments have created a problem by moving large populations into districts with inadequate schools and insufficient tax revenues.

Representative Henderson Lanham (D., Ga.) said many of Georgia's children were unable to attend school because of insufficient school buildings.

The committee asked each witness a series of questions including whether or not the Governor of the State had appealed for Federal aid.

Bjoerling Returns As Opera Star

By Paul Hume

Thirteen years ago, when he was only 26-years-old Jussi Bjoerling was a sensitive, skilled singer of songs.

He had not yet made his American opera debut, which came that year with the Chicago Opera Company. In his singing of Schubert, Brahms, and Strauss there was a note of youthful exuberance matched by an artistry beyond his years.

Last night as Bjoerling sang in Constitution Hall, one could see what the years have done to his singing. Now he is an opera star of first magnitude. They say that when he is in top form in New York, he is the finest tenor of the Italian or French wing. That may be.

But he is no longer the careful, musicianly singer of songs he once was. His program last night leaned heavily upon songs of German and Scandinavian composers. In encores he became the opera singer, with arias from Puccini and Massenet joining those of Tschaikowsky and Flotow on the printed list.

His encores of Strauss' Morgen was genuinely touching, and Schubert's Forelle gave the first light touch to a heavy group. For today Bjoerling sings his Schubert, Brahms, and Strauss with slow tempos, excessive phrasing for breaths, and in the stereotyped manner of many opera singers.

His opera last night brought the house down. It is interesting that he found it judicious to transpose both "M'appari" and Rudolfo's first aria down a half tone. His voice was in its best form in seasons, and he did not push it at any time as he has in the past.

The audience warmed to his offerings as he did to his singing. By the end of the recital, artist and audience had come quite close together. Yet it was a strangely impersonal concert most of the time. Frederick Schauwecker played well when Bjoerling sang well.

Harvard Professor To Lecture Here

George Sarton, professor of the history of science at Harvard University, will give a lecture at 8:30 p. m. today in the Coolidge auditorium of the Library of Congress.

Dr. Sarton, recipient of many international honors, will speak on "The Incubation of Western Culture in the Middle East." His lecture will be sponsored by the George C. Keiser Foundation.

Montgomery Zone Action Rescinded

The Montgomery County Council yesterday rescinded the action of the county's former government body, the county commissioners, in zoning the Bogley property at Greentree and Old Georgetown rds. as commercial.

The council not only rescinded the commissioners' action but denied an application for a commercial zoning. The body thus ended—temporarily, at least—a 17-month dispute that at one point reached the Maryland State Court of Appeals.

In its opinion, the council pointed out that commercial sections in Bethesda "make unnecessary and undesirable the development of a small shopping center on . . . the property."

Owner of the property is Samuel E. Bogley, Bethesda real estate operator.

U. S. Show of Power Planned for Korea

Seoul, March 28 (AP)—The U. S. carrier Boxer will send two displays of naval air strength over South Korea on its visit next week.

Sixty planes will fly over the southern cities of Pusan, Taegu and Chinhai April 4, and over Seoul next day.

Hike in County Grant Asked For Rockville

Mayor G. LaMar Kelly of Rockville, yesterday asked the Montgomery County Council to increase its lump sum contribution paid the town in lieu of taxes.

Kelly told the council at its meeting in the Rockville Courthouse that one-tenth of the utilities provided by the town are used by county buildings.

He asked that the present $1050 received annually from the county be increased to at least $10,000.

"It is unfair," Kelly asserted, "to ask our taxpayers to assume practically the entire load of paying for sewer, water, electricity and other facilities used by the county."

The Rockville mayor also asked for county aid in paying the town's share of the cost of the proposed by-pass of Route 240 around the town.

The State Roads Commission has recommended that the town contribute $50,000, Kelly said.

"We just can't bear such a cost," he declared.

A resolution by the Rockville Chamber of Commerce opposing the location of the proposed new county office building was presented by Kelly.

Sothoron Bill Signed By Lane

The Sothoron bill to reorganize Prince Georges County government was signed into law yesterday by Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., as he cleared up his work on the 1950 output of the Maryland General Assembly.

Here are other local bills affecting the nearby Maryland area which became law yesterday:

Setting circuit court grand jury panels at between 150 and 300 names in a number of counties, including Prince Georges and Montgomery.

Raising the pay of the Montgomery County sheriff from $3000 to $4800 a year, and furnishing the sheriff with an automobile.

Giving Montgomery County Council additional powers to borrow on uncollected taxes.

Transferring to the Montgomery County Council authority over prisoners in the county jail.

Three bills affecting the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission will remedy a flaw in a 1949 act; give WSSC right to supervise house connections for water and sewer; give WSSC authority to issue one million dollars in storm drainage system bonds.

PARRY-PHRASING

Expect No Slip Between Cup Of Glory and Lip This Time

By Ellen Buell Parry

IT IS ninety-nine and forty-four one-hundredths percent certain that Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of George Washington University, will be elected the next president of the National League of American Pen Women.

Mrs. Marvin has been the league's first vice president the last two years, and traditionally the vice president of the league is moved up to the No. 1 job. What's more, Mrs. Marvin has been nominated and has no opposition. Her election will take place during the league's biennial convention opening here Saturday, but advance congratulations won't be out of order.

Washington will be filled with feminine scribes, composers and poets from all over, for the convention. Among them will be such well-known authors as Taylor Caldwell, whose book, "Let Love Come Last," was the Literary Guild selection in August; Margaret Culkin Banning and Faith Baldwin.

The League of Pen Women was organized in a Washington living-room—on Rhode Island avenue, to be moderately exact—53 years ago. It started as a small literary club with 17 members. Now there are 102 branches in the United States, with a membership of more than 5000 professional and nonprofessional writers and composers, who meet regularly in study groups. The new—almost—president is not a writer, but a musician. The league now includes representatives of most of the arts.

THE Reverend Harold Bend Sedgwick, the very young-looking bachelor minister at St. Thomas Church on 18th st., tells this story on himself.

He observes the very nice custom of standing in the vestibule of his church to greet people before the sermon as well as speaking to them afterwards. One Sunday, just after he had come to Washington, a little old lady drove up in a large limousine and called to him, "Young man, will you come down and help me out of my car?"

"I'd be delighted," said Mr. Sedgwick as he ran down to assist her.

After aiding the small lady into a pew, she said, "Young man, tell me, who is going to be the preacher here today?"

He replied modestly, but in a rather loud voice, realizing by now that she was quite deaf, "Mr. Sedgwick is the preacher."

"Humph, never heard of him!" she exclaimed. Rising on her cane, the little old lady said doggedly, "Young man, would you do me one more favor?"

"I'd be glad to," said accommodating Mr. Sedgwick.

"Would you help me back out of here into my car again?"

"Humph, Never Heard of Him!"

Mrs. Skinner Elected D. C. DAR Regent

MRS. JAMES B. SKINNER was elected State regent of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday, the final day of the annual three-day conference at the Natural History Building.

Mrs. Skinner, outgoing State vice regent, succeeds Mrs. David L. Wells, who was indorsed yesterday as a candidate for vice president general in the national elections of April, 1951.

Other State officers chosen yesterday for a two-year term are Miss Mamie F. Hawkins, vice regent; Mrs. Dorothy W. S. Ragan, chaplain; Mrs. William S. Kenyon, recording secretary; Mrs. James Haswell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elsie Cahill, treasurer; Mrs. Joseph H. Galliher, registrar; Miss Faustine Dennis, historian, and Mrs. Harold C. Marsh, librarian.

Voice Disapproval

DURING a lengthy resolutions session at yesterday's meeting, the Daughters voiced disapproval of the proposed razing of the United States Soldiers Home and petitioned Congress to pass H.R. 6326, which calls for an appropriation of 17 million dollars for the home's permanent fund.

Also, they suggested the new South Capitol st. bridge be named the Major L'Enfant Bridge, in memory of the planner and architect of the Capital, and asked Congress to repeal the personal property tax on household effects and to lower the District's real estate taxes.

The remainder of the resolutions renewed the DAR stand against "Government control" (as differentaited from private enterprise), "socialized medicine," un-American textbooks and study magazines, international trade and labor organizations and Communists in the Government.

Approves H-Bomb

MRS. ROSCOE C. O'BYRNE, DAR president general, addressed the banquet at the Shoreham Hotel last evening which closed the convention.

In view of the recent expose of Communist spies in this country, she stated her approval of our manufacture of the "H-bomb."

"America's security," she said, "cannot be maintained in the world today by pacifist means. The warning in a scrap of paper does not carry the same weight as a warning wrapped up in the atomic missile."

Mrs. O'Bryne will go on to Baltimore, Md., to attend the forty-fifth annual conference of the Maryland DAR, taking place today and Thursday at the Sheraton Belvedere Hotel.

Hospital Board To Sponsor Concert

The Ladies Board of Georgetown University Hospital and the South Atlantic Club of Holy Cross alumni are cosponsors for a Holy Cross Music Clubs concert and dance benefit to be held at the Shoreham Wednesday evening, April 12. Proceeds of the event will be used to purchase an iron lung for Georgetown University Hospital.

Among those who will be ushers at the concert are Miss Pat Daley, Miss Pierce Butler and Miss Maurine Nee.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Born on Wrong Side of Track in Prairie Town, Woman Finds Life Unbearable There as People Call Her "Old Maid"; She's 51 and Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was born on the wrong side of the tracks in a prairie town. Most of my contemporaries who hadn't the luck to escape have married and accepted their fate.

My life work has been trying to rise above my environment. By constant hard work and no play I managed to acquire a piece of property, badge of independence here. Now, at 51, I find myself still on the wrong side of the tracks, and just self-educated enough to see the difference between this existence and the one I wanted.

I did not marry because I hoped to venture across the tracks some day, and I knew there would be no getaway if I married here. And to marry across the tracks was beyond my capacity in youth, for my background was one of poverty and every lack.

I hung on here through adversity, hoping for something better; but now life seems unbearable. I have no friends except a few business associates and wherever I am people refer to me as an old maid. That seems to be the brand of complete isolation in this place. Is there any way out of the present situation? Any relief from the fruitless struggle for betterment?

Would you advise that I sell my property, a five-room modern home, and settle in some place where I am not known, to try to lead a normal life? I've had to educate myself, so I am handy in several occupations. Tell me, what do other women do who are branded old maids? And why is a spinster, although capable and helpful, so unwanted by the general public? Answers to these questions may solve my problem; and I shall be grateful for even a kind word from you. A. R.

Walls Self From Life

DEAR A. R.: The proposition I see is that you emotionally rejected your environment at an early age, and when a youngster does that, it usually means that he first felt rejected by those around him. And this diagnosis of the beginning of your troubles seems corroborated by the fact that you psychologically "withdrew" from your surroundings although unable to leave them bodily.

Quite honestly you believe that you stayed single to keep the way open to cross the tracks some day; but it seems to me that you are rationalizing a painful deprivation in thinking that—and the deprivation to which I refer is lack of love. To rationalize a course of action is to claim a plausible face-saving explanation for it, when inwardly one dreads to examine the truth of the matter.

Had you fallen in love on the wrong side of the tracks, you would have married (as escape from loneliness) if the man had been willing, I am sure. And since you make no mention of having dismissed any importunate suitors, I assume there were none.

But that's not surprising, because men are afraid of a woman of stone, and that's what you've been—or what you've seemed like—in your long struggle for betterment.

Acted Stoic for 40 Years

YOU'VE ACTED the stoic for 40-odd years, seemingly devoid of ardent, wistful or friendly feelings. Why? Because you'd adopted this hardshell defense against rebuff almost before you could walk, I suppose, and certainly long before you'd reached the age of reason. Thus by the time you could think and remember, you already felt scorned by authority in your environment and cast aside by contemporaries—in short, rejected by all whose acceptance counted in that environment.

That's how your history of isolation started, in the soil of childhood misery, neglect and humiliation. It's not a recent experience foisted on you by adult neighbors and associates. It's not due to your being unmarried.

Rather you are unmarried because you walled yourself in from life, compulsively resolved never to try your luck at being sentimental, vulnerable, openhearted and love-seeking until you were transplanted to a different social world.

Might Make New Start

AT YOUR AGE, a change of place wouldn't erase psychological maladjustments of long standing. But if you could begin to see the nature of your problem, and realize that inner change is possible, then a move to another environment might be a boost for the better—by giving you a new start among folks who won't type you in terms of past behavior, but will respond at once to the sunnier self you're bringing forth.

Or if you prefer to stay where you are, you will eventually find others changing towards you, in proportion as you deeply change from bleakness to sweetness of character. For guidance, read Glenn Clark's autobiography, "A Man's Reach," published by Harper & Brothers. M. H.

Women Prepare for Drive

Liberty Bell to Open Bond Sales May 15

By Norma Lanum

THE 1950 Savings Bond Drive will open May 15 in Philadelphia, Pa., when a gentle bong on the cracked Liberty Bell is picked up on a Nation-wide broadcast by the four major networks.

From that day until the end of the drive, July 4, 48 replica Liberty Bells will ring in all sections of the country.

The replicas, one for each State, are being made in Annecy, France, to symbolize the theme of the bond drive: "Save for Your Independence."

Details of the coming campaign were revealed yesterday at an all-day meeting of women representing federated clubs, national magazines and big industries who will assist in the drive.

Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder launched the meeting at the Treasury Building by suggesting that the savings bonds should stand for a symbol of Independence just as the Liberty Bell does.

Later in the program Leon J. Markham, Director of Sales for the Bond Drive, said the tone of the replica bells is guaranteed to be the exact tone of the original bell when it was cracked tolling at Chief Justice Marshall's funeral services in 1835. Mr. Markham consulted this country's leading bell experts to get that authentic tone.

Groups ranging from the steel industry to the Nation's newsboys have come to the call of the colors for the new bond drive, according to the sales director.

U. S. Steel is donating material for the supports and mountings for each bell. Brooklyn Navy Yard will unload and assemble the bells, then put each on a big red, white and blue truck, compliments of Ford Co. A corps of 200,000 newspaper carriers will leave bond subscription blanks with their customers.

Also on the program was a talk by Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States. She traced the economic role of women in this country, who now control 70 percent of its wealth.

Vernon L. Clark, National Director of the Bond Drive, said that this campaign will influence the entire economic future of the United States.

Talks also were heard by Miss Margaret Hickey, editor of the public affairs department of the Ladies Home Journal; Mrs. Oscar A. Ahlgren, vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and Miss Sylvia F. Porter, financial editor of the New York Post.

Finale to the meeting was Mrs. Truman's reception at Blair House, 4 p. m., for the women leaders.

Thousand Attend Hadassah Donor Dinner

Shipment of arms by England to Egypt and other Middle Eastern countries is dangerous, Bartley Crum told members of Hadassah last night.

Mr. Crum, recently returned from Israel and a former member of the Anglo-American Commission of Inquiry on Palestine, was guest speaker at Hadassah's nineteenth annual donor dinner and dance at the Mayflower Hotel. The dinner was attended by over 1000 members and guests.

Mr. Crum believes that the United States should protest England's action since the shipment of arms, namely jet planes and tanks, is aggressive in character.

"The basic policy of the United States," he continued," is to defend freedom and enlarge the areas of the earth occupied by free men. Our Government should support Israel since it is the only democratic state in the Near East."

Peace between Egypt and Israel, he said, would bring about peace between Syria and Israel and Lebanon and Israel. Peace between these countries, he stated, would pave the way for a Jordan Valley project which would profit Jews and Arabs alike.

Fresh Apple Slices with Tuna Fish Spread
Oat Cheesettes Hot Chocolate
Butterscotch Brownies

OAT CHEESETTES—Ingredients: ½ cup sifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, 1/3 cup fat, 1/3 cup grated cheddar cheese, ½ cup rolled oats, cold water, paprika.

Method: Sift together flour, salt and cayenne. Cut in fat with pastry blender or two knives or rub in with fingers. Add cheese and rolled oats; mix well. Add enough water to hold ingredients together. Roll out on lightly floured board to ⅛-inch thickness. Cut in 1½-inch squares. Sprinkle tops with paprika. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake in hot (425F.) oven 20 to 25 minutes or until browned. Makes about 40 cheesettes.

Diplomats Take a Breather

By Marie McNair

FOR delegates to the special session of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council it isn't all work and no play. There's been a series of parties in their honor and there are more to come.

Yesterday Edward G. Miller, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, who is top United States delegate to the conference, entertained at a reception at the Mayflower with Mrs. Miller. In the receiving line with them was good-looking Walter Donnelly, American Ambassador to Venezuela, who rotated with others of the United States delegation, including William McChesney Martin, jr., Assistant Secretary of Treasury; Albert F. Nufer, Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State, and Rafael Pico, who is chairman of the Puerto Rican Planning Board. Mesdames Martin, Nufer and Thorp were also in the line.

Around a buffet which featured empanadas hot from the oven; pizza squares, hot fried oysters, shrimp and Roquefort spread, were spotted Gonzalo Guell and Senora de Guell, Dr. Jose Baron and Senora de Baron, of the Cuban contingent; the Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco and the Argentine Ambassador, Dr. Jeronimo Remorino.

With the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen were the former Ambassador Francisco Troncoso and his lovely Senora. The Ecuador Ambassador, Augusto Dillon, who heads his country's delegation, was there and others were the Panama Ambassador, Rodolfo Herbruger who said Senora de Herbruger was in Florida to see their son; the Peruvian Ambassador, Fernando Berckemeyer, Chief of the Peruvian delegation, with Senora de Berckemeyer in toast and black print; Senator Theodore Francis Green, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Dr. Jose Mora of Uruguay and Senora de Mora, Mrs. Ellen Woodward of Social Security and the Paul Daniels—he's United States Ambassador to OAS.

Many of the delegates later attended a reception and buffet supper at the Venezuelan Embassy. The Ambassador and Senora de Pocaterra entertained in celebration of the 200th anniversary of their country's national hero, Miranda.

Ambassador's Wife Guest at Luncheon

MME. MUNTHE de MORGENSTIERNE, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, who returned Monday from a holiday at the Everglades Club at Palm Beach, was guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday given by Mme. Vladimir Rybar. The hostess is the widow of the Yugoslav Ambassador to Norway.

The 70 guests were seated at small tables decorated with varicolored tulips and candy-filled Easter bunnies.

Hostesses at the other tables were Mrs. Norman Makin, wife of the Australian Ambassador; Lady Berendsen, wife of the New Zealand Ambassador; Senora de Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassador; Senora de la Colina, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, and Senora de Berckemeyer, wife of the Peruvian Ambassador.

Deb Coming Home, Party Planned for Her

MR. AND MRS. EDMUND H. PARRY, JR., have sent out invitations for a 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. cocktail party at Cricket Hill, their home, near Chain Bridge, on Thursday, April 6, for Mildred Coe, who made her debut on Christmas Day. She is coming home Saturday from Vassar for her spring vacation.

Milly is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conway P. Coe. Mr. Coe was the youngest Commissioner of Patents in history and held that position for 12 years under President Roosevelt. He now is vice president of Radio Corp. of America.

Before going to Vassar last fall, Milly attended Madeira School.

The Minister of Austria and Mme. Kleinwaechter were hosts at dinner last evening at the legation, entertaining in honor of John G. Erhardt, United States Minister to Vienna, who is home on leave.

Other guests were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Rusk; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Achilles, Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Francis T. Williamson, Mrs. Eleanor Dulles, Colburn Kidd and Mr. and Mrs. James Orr Denby.

Embassy Hostesses Guests at Lunch

MEMBERS of committees for the House and Embassy Tour to be held April 8 for the benefit of the Washington Home for Incurables, attended a luncheon yesterday at the United Nations Club. Hostesses were Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson, chairman of the benefit committee; Mrs. James L. Houghteling, president, Board of Managers of the Home for Incurables; Mrs. Paul H. Nitze, chairman of the housekeeping committee of the home, and Mrs. Daniel Blain, chairman of posters and chairman of the admissions committee.

Bee in Mrs. Truman's Bonnet Keeps Mum

By Elizabeth Maguire

WHAT KIND of a new bonnet, if any, the First Lady will wear to church on Easter Sunday remained as secret as the formula for the H-bomb today, despite efforts of White House correspondents to wheedle this fashion news from Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Truman's secretary.

Whatever the hat, Mrs. Truman will wear it in Washington, not in Key West. This much was revealed during the biweekly press conference. Although the First Lady will join the President in Florida this weekend, she will return after a week's vacation to spend Easter here with her mother, Mrs. David Wallace.

Margaret Truman will join her parents for the week's reunion in Florida, but has not yet decided on her Easter plans, Mrs. Helm said.

This evening Mrs. Truman will go to the Ballet Theater at Constitution Hall and later to a buffet supper at the Mayflower Hotel given by Miss Lucia Chase and Blevins Davis for the artists of the ballet. Mr. Davis, like the Trumans, hails from Independence, Mo.

Mrs. Truman will have as her guests at the ballet former Ambassador James Bruce and Mrs. Bruce, Representative and Mrs. Clifford Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Stewart and Mr. and Mrs. George Howe of New York.

When Mrs. Truman returns from Florida, her first engagement will be at the French Embassy. She will attend the tea to be given there for the House and Embassy benefit tour on April 8.

The following day, Easter Sunday, Mrs. Truman will go to a tea which Judge and Mrs. Justin Miller are giving in honor of Mrs. Henry Grady, wife of the U. S. Ambassador to Greece, at the Wardman Park Hotel, from 4:30 to 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. Grady and a few of her friends will be Mrs. Truman's guests on Monday, April 10, at a luncheon at Blair House.

Mrs. Truman will attend a tea in her honor by the Naval Academy Women's Club at the Naval Academy on Tuesday, April 11, and on Wednesday, April 12, she will be the guest of honor at the Woman's National Democratic Club Fashion Show at the Statler Hotel.

Sewing Club Was Speechless

When I Served My Gorgeous Reddi-wip Dessert!

For once everybody was speechless when I proudly brought in my gorgeous dessert, lusciously decorated with Reddi-wip. They just couldn't understand how I could serve anything so glamorous with absolutely no preparation or work. Reddi-wip whips itself at the touch of a finger. Made with pure, rich cream, it turns even simplest desserts like gelatins, cupcakes, and puddings into gorgeous treats—instantly. Get Reddi-wip today!

Ink Spots Don't Like to Vacate Their Snug Berths on Your Carpet, But Anne Offers Some Helpful Hints

DEAR ANNE:

I have a wall-to-wall carpet in my home. It is a gray, carved pattern. Some ink was spilled on several places and, since it cannot be sent to a cleaner, would appreciate learning if there is a home remedy I can use without injuring the rug.

Rose Citrenbaum
1321 Sheridan st. nw.

It's hard to persuade ink spots to vacate any carpet, most of all a tacked-down one. Start on these by mixing equal parts water and alcohol with cornmeal, salt, or corn starch to make a paste. Rub paste into stain and when dry, brush away the powder. It should absorb a good deal of ink. Repeat process until the paste will take out no more.

It's probable you will then have to resort to a bleach and here you must move cautiously in order not to take the color out of the carpet. One mild bleach you might use is hydrogen peroxide. Mix it with cornstarch to make a paste, work into rug and leave for several hours. Repeat this too if it helps.

DEAR ANNE:

Will you kindly advise the best method to use in order to give furniture an "antique white" finish?

P. Gilchrist
2465 18th st. nw.

First step—unless the furniture already has a good white finish—is to cover it with white paint or enamel. When dry, sand smooth.

Apply one coat of a dark glaze and wipe it away almost immediately with a lintless cloth in such a manner as to leave the glaze along the edges, in the carvings or moldings, and remove it almost entirely from the raised places.

As a glaze, use either the prepared ones sold by some paint stores or varnish thinned with one fourth as much turpentine, adding burnt umber or color-in-oil to give it the shade you wish.

PETUNIA!

How faithfully it's served me—
My loyal old beret . . .
But now my mirror tells me
I must throw it plumb away!

But the felt can still be useful, Petunia! You can glue strips of it on the bottoms of lamps—ceramic ware—ashtrays—to protect your table tops.

DEAR ANNE:

For your gal wanting scale-model furniture for model house hobby, New York Times Magazine tells (December 26, 1948) of designer Paul MacAlister's "Plan-a-Room" kit, with 75 miniature furniture "symbols" in unpainted wood, then available in New York at two different stores, price about $7.

MRS. JAMES F. CLARKE,
309 Marva Highway,
Silver Spring, Md.

The Washington branch of one of these stores has the kit you mention, priced at $6.95. The telephone number: Sterling 0606. Thanks for the tip.

DEAR ANNE:

I understand there is a firm in Denver, Colo., which has for sale odd pieces of china in well-known patterns, especially old patterns. I believe, as a matter of fact, you may have published the name of this firm in your column some time ago.

Henry B. Stauffer
3521 39th st. nw.

I wonder if what you recall is our mention of the Silver State Exchange, Denver, Colo., which stocks old silver patterns? This is the only Denver firm called to mind by your query. I do not know of a similar firm stocking china in out-of-date patterns. Perhaps some reader can help us.

Fluoride Plan For Water in Md. Rejected

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission voted last night not to place fluoride in the nearby Maryland water system.

The action represents rejection of a strong recommendation of the Southern Maryland Dental Society. Fluorination of the water system, the dental group argued, would go a long way toward checking tooth decay.

A commission spokesman said the plan seems to have "some merit," but the commission does not feel sufficient exploratory work has been conducted.

After careful investigation, the official said, "we found that only 17 jurisdictions in the country now fluorinate water, and none of them are on the Eastern Seaboard.

The commission estimated it would cost about 12 million dollars to install fluorination equipment and its maintenance would cost about four tenths of a cent per 1000 gallons of water, the spokesman said.

Sightseeing Bus Drivers' Settle Dispute

Representatives of 150 AFL sightseeing bus drivers yesterday reached an agreement on a new work contract with two sightseeing firms, averting a strike threatened for Friday, opening date of the Cherry Blossom Festival.

Subject to union membership ratification, the agreement with Sightseeing, Inc., and Blue and Grey Sightseeing Tours, Inc., provides for higher mileage rates on charter trips, increased ticket sale commissions and an unusual job security feature.

The present hourly rate of $1.30, with time an dhalf after 8 hours a day or 48 hours a week, is continued in the agreement.

The charter rate will be raised from 5.08 cents a mile to 6 cents, and the hourly rate will apply if higher than the mileage amount on a charter trip.

The union, Local 1138, Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, will vote on ratification at 8:30 p. m., Thursday, at the Dodge Hotel, according to John R. Shannon, business agent.

East Facing Problem on Water Supply

America's water problem has shifted from the arid West to the Eastern industrial centers forcing immediate planning to meet steadily growing needs, Assistant Secretary of Interior William E. Warne said yesterday.

Addressing about 500 members of the American Public Power Association, Warne emphasized that water was not "particularly scarce" this year, nor is there a long-range deficiency in water supply.

Warne addressed the opening luncheon of the APPA's seventh annual convention at the Shoreham Hotel. The meeting continues today and Thursday.

Another speaker, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) called for broad development of hydroelectric projects so that America could achieve the estimated 80 to 100 million kilowatts capacity available in such projects. The present development is 17 million, he said.

The APPA president, Samuel B. Morris, general manager of the Los Angeles water and power department, declared utility company "publicity and propaganda" failed to point out that on multiple-purpose water projects the power facility alone had to return the complete capital cost plus interest in 50 years.

Front Royal Plans Big Day For 'Groaner'

Front Royal, Va., March 28 (Spl.)—This little town's biggest event in years—Bing Crosby Day—is expected to draw 30,000 people Saturday.

A program of 12 events, beginning at 8:30 a. m. and ending at midnight, will feature six personall appearances by the famous singer himself.

Highlights will be dedication of the Bing Crosby municipal stadium, for which the star donated $1000 two years ago, and his appearance at the premier of his new motion picture, "Riding High."

Crosby will ride in a parade through the town, award cups for parade entries, act as host to 350 Northern Virginia school children at a special showing of the movie and appear at two dances during the evening.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

More Than 50 Nations Represented at Coronation

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

CHAPTER XI—The Coronation

WITH ALL the splendor and solemnity of Roman ritual, Eugenio Pacelli was crowned Pope on that early March Sunday of 1939.

The ceremony of the coronation, being the highest, is the most impressive and—after canonization ceremonies—the longest of all functions of the church. It took more than an hour alone for the procession, bringing the Pope from his state apartments in the pontifical palace, where he had been robed, to reach the high altar in St. Peter's Basilica.

It was preceded by Swiss guards in their uniforms of yellow, blue and red, and with enormous halberds. Then came a master of ceremonies and other members of the papal household, procurators of the Ecclesiastical Colleges, the Pope's preachers and confessors, and the heads of all the religious orders, monks and friars, many barefooted and with ropes for girdles. The apostolic messengers in violet soutanes, consistorial advocates, honorary chamberlains, choristers of the Sistine Chapel, auditors of the Rota in surplices and the miter which he was to wear followed by two of the Pope's private chaplains. They carried the mitre which he was to wear during the mass. An officer of the Signatura carried the thurible for the incense. An auditor of the Rota in white tunic carried the Pope's cross, walking between seven officers who bore seven candles. They were followed by the Penitentiaries of St. Peter's in white chasubles, mitered abbots, Commanders of the Order of the Holy Ghost, Oriental Bishops and Archbishops in splendid vestments, Bishops and Archbishops acting as attendants at the papal throne, Patriarchs, Cardinal Deacons, Cardinal Priests, and Cardinal Bishops, with ermine capes over their trailing crimson silk robes.

Then came the Pope in solemn majesty, carried above the great concourse of people; he sat in the Chair of State in which he was borne almost motionless, huge peacock-feathered fans waving over his head. He was robed in a great white cope, embroidered in gold over his vestments of white. On his head was a miter adorned with precious stones. His bearing was impressive. His tall, frail frame, his collected countenance, his wonderful eyes, his grace of gesture, his perfect poise; a flawless picture.

Rocking slightly from time to time, the chair was carried by grooms in renaissance liveries, crimson knee breeches and liveries of red damask. Near by were two privy chamberlains—their red capes trimmed with ermine, and candelabra in their hands.

Act of Homage

WHEN he reached the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament, Pius XII left his chair for a moment of adoration, and was then carried to the nave of the Chapel of St. Gregory, where a throne awaited him, and where the Cardinals made their act of homage, kissing his ring and foot. Patriarchs and bishops followed suit. The Pope was then reminded of the mortality of all men, as he again sat on his Chair of State, while a master of ceremonies lit a piece of tow attached to a silver rod, then knelt before him and chanted in slow measure: "Holy Father! So passes the glory of the world." This warning was repeated as the Pope passed the bronze statue of St. Peter, of which only the dark, bearded metal face was to be seen, the body dressed in pontifical cope, the head crowned with a triple tiara—the 262d Pope passing the effigy of the first.

Then mass began. Certain impressions linger in one's memory: the white-mitered figure, erect on its white throne in the apse with a flood of light upon it; moments of absolute silence when one was conscious of the great sea of faces in the nave and transepts all bent in one direction; a cloud of incense rising between the pillars of the great canopy above the altar where the Pope himself was officiating.

There was the sudden thrill when his gentle voice was first heard, diffused by the loudspeakers throughout the building, as he intoned the Gloria in Excelsis; and the still greater thrill when silver trumpets, concealed in the dome, sounded triumphantly at the elevation of the Host.

More Than 50 States

AMONG the tens of thousands of every race and tongue crowding the Basilica, the royal tribune assembled the delegations sent by more than 50 States: from the Crown Prince of Italy, in general's uniform, to the Irish Prime Minister, Mr. de Valera, in evening dress, with the broad ribbon of the Grand Cross of the Order of Pius IX over his chest; from President Roosevelt's special envoy, Mr. Joseph Kennedy, to the Duke of Norfolk, in the scarlet dress uniform of the guards, representing King George VI.

After five hours of pageantry inside the Basilica, the scene moved to the outer loggia of St. Peter's. More than half a million people had waited there from dawn, and it was now well past

1. The ceremony can have had no equal in the annals of the church.

The eyes of the whole world were turned to it, the ears of the whole world tuned in to it through nation-wide broadcasts in both hemispheres, as Eugenio Pacelli sat on his throne, facing Rome and the world, surrounded by his court and his Cardinals. Before him the immense circle of St. Peter's Square inclosed within the Vatican colonnades, and the whole of the broad avenue, as far as the Tiber, packed with a solid mass of people.

The enormous crowd swayed and eddied, calling for him, waving handkerchiefs, cheering him. Thus in full sight of the multitude the jewel bedecked golden tiara was placed on his head, and modern loud-speakers intoned, whilst modern wireless echoed into the farthest corners of the world, the time-honored formula for the coronation of a pontiff.

Tape Method Speeds Music Instruction

Junior's music teacher may become a household item with the advent of a new way of producing virtuosos in a hurry as described yesterday to area music merchants.

Called "The Electronic Memory Method of Music Instruction," the new way just adds a wire recorder to everything that went before.

Norman C. Owen, sales manager of the distribution division of the Webster-Chicago Corp., Chicago, Ill., told about it yesterday at the Statler Hotel at the closing session of the Eastern States Regional Conference of the National Association of Music Merchants.

What happens when junior takes a spool of recording wire to the teacher's studio and brings the spool home with every flat and pedagogical admonition recorded?

"Then practice is entirely different," Owen said, "the student can hear the teacher's words any time he wants to. The teacher's personality and voice are there, too."

According to music teachers who use the system, Owen said, students learn their lessons from 30 to 50 percent quicker.

Some Symphony Notes From the Small Fry

Concert Impresario Patrick Hayes has an 8-year-old son, Bryant, who is not a bad little promoter himself.

Bryant is a member of a recently formed neighborhood club devoted to such noble principles as "Don't fight," "Do a good deed every day," and "Be kind to your mother."

Fellow members are 9-year-old Bernice Cummings and the Mack brothers, John and James, who are 8 and 10 years old. They all live on Johnson pl., in Alexandria, Va.

Ever since the club was formed and the creed agreed upon, members have been most conscientious in adhering to it.

So much so, that their delighted mothers offered to pay into the club treasury the sum of 50 cents for each week that the reformation would continue.

This sudden influx of wealth was welcome; but it created a problem. The club couldn't possibly spend the dough as fast as it was rolling in. A special meeting was called to consider the matter.

But with the resourcefulness of youth, the members found a way out. They voted to divert half of their weekly income to the National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund. Promoter of the idea: Promoter Hayes (the younger).

At Symphony headquarters, one old pro greeted the news with a sigh and the wish: "If we had a few thousand more children like that, our worries would be over."

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. M. H. Stokes, 5412 32d st. nw.: Thanks for the nice note.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Male tiger kitten; also lovable female kitten." (Falls Church 0411.)

"Five fat, healthy 6-week-old puppies; four males, one female." (Chestnut 0301, after 5 p. m.)

"Black female kitten, part-Siamese, 7 months old." (Oliver 7691, evenings.)

"Three housebroken tiger kittens, 7 weeks old." (Michigan 4485.)

I HATE MYSELF FOR THINGS LIKE THIS

Why must I be so stubborn? I haven't had a cigar since they raised the price of my favorite brand from "3-for-40" to 15 cents straight. And I'll guarantee you I'm suffering more than my tobacconist is.

MISCELLANY

Everybody has his own way of deciding when Spring has really arrived. For me, it's the day when I start perspiring on the bus, and wonder why I wore a coat to work . . . H. M. Terry of 416 N. Thomas st., Arlington, Va., asks whether it's true that a local organization collects Christmas cards for Navajo Indians. Can anybody supply the answer? . . . Walter A. Klieger of 4111 N. 3d rd., Arlington, Va., raises a questioning eyebrow at this paragraph, which appeared in The Washington Post recently: "He was born in Germany, but became a native of Hawaii in 1896" . . . Leonard C. Bluebond of 8911 Bradmoor dr., Bethesda, Md., says Clark Griffith ought to be ashamed of himself for ignoring John Jachym, who bought a 40 percent interest in the Nats and would like to give Washington a winning team . . . Shucks, Len, Griff would like to give us a winning team, too. It would mean money in his pocket. The trouble is that there are seven other teams in the league who disagree . . . TWA sneaked me a couple of slices of that enriched "Farm Bread" that a Kansas baker shipped in for members of Congress, and believe me it tasted good; the extra wheat content gives it a richer flavor . . . If you wonder why we haven't had any rhymes from Poet Jay Aitch lately, one explanation might be that currently he has articles and stories in 55 different magazines. Those who attended last month's meeting of the District Line Club and heard him participate in the round-table discussion of free-lance writing know how much working time 55 articles require . . . 5-year-old Jeffrey Rosen of 8503 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Silver Spring, Md., is probably highly in favor of muddy roads. When a motorist got stuck in the goo in his neighborhood the other day, Jeff steered him to a pay station phone. And when the guy found himself without any coins, Jeff supplied a nickel—and got a dollar bill in exchange . . . How many children will have to die in front of the Southeast Washington Boys Club before officials will authorize a traffic light for that area?

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The way of human nature proves
There is no perfect man.
Yet there is hope for those who try
And do the best they can.

Liquor interests are supporting a bill to establish minimum prices on whisky. Apparently they feel that our corn crop should yield a fair return, whether it's sold by the bushel or the jug.

Red Cross Reaches 77% Of 1950 Goal

Chairman Daniel W. Bell of the 1950 District Red Cross campaign yesterday said the drive would have to be extended into April as workers reported contributions totalling 77.65 percent of the quota.

He predicted that a week or so after March 31, originally set as the final day of the drive, contributions would go over the top.

The "top" is $1,039,000, which the campaign workers are seeking from residents of the District, two nearby Maryland counties, nearby Virginia counties and Alexandria.

New contributions epoted yesterday at the eighth report lucheon, held at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce building, amounted to $68,164 from 18,421 contributors.

The grand total thus far is $806,832 from 196,620 donors—some $60,000 and 23,000 contributors behind the point reached at the same stage of the 1949 campaign, Bell told the luncheon group.

Randolph G. Bishop, director of the drive, pointed out that last year, contributions were just under the quota as March ended, but wound up at 113 percent early in April.

Mrs. Peter M. Miller, vice president and editor in chief of the Washington Times-Herald, the main speaker, suggested that the Red Cross should do more to publicize its peacetime work, which is not as well known to the public as its wartime activities, she said.

"I don't think people know the extent of your disaster relief work—or how you get a veteran a home away from his in-laws," she said.

Robert H. Davidson, chairman of public relations for the telephone company, as well as for the Red Cross, said the newspapers and radio stations here are not "merely helping us, they are part of us." He introduced representatives of the press and radio.

Kerr Seen Overselling Gas Bill

By Drew Pearson

The natural gas industry's smoothest salesman will learn today whether he has made his biggest sale.

Sen. Kerr

He is amiable, persuasive Senator Bob Kerr, Oklahoma Democrat, who has been trying to sell the Senate on exempting natural gas producers from Federal regulation. For three weeks he has been shuffling from Senator to Senator, haranguing, cajoling, pumping them full of sales talk. This afternoon they will give their answer in a roll-call vote.

Already a millionaire oilman, Kerr has a financial stake in his own salesmanship. During most of his one year in the Senate, Kerr's voting record has been for the public interest. But in the gas bill, his gain would be the public's loss, for the consumers must eventually pay any resulting increase in the cost of gas. Certainly the reason the natural gas companies want to escape Federal regulation isn't to reduce prices.

Whatever the outcome, the Senator from Oklahoma has set a record in senatorial salesmanship. He nursed his bill every step of the way, fighting for it comma by comma in the Senate and even turning his homey charm on President Truman to get a White House indorsement.

On the Senate floor, Kerr set up a wall of billboard-size charts and graphs, portraying the natural gas industry from every statistical view. With this as a backstop, he ambled up and down the Senate chamber, haggling with opponents face to face, gesturing under their noses, pleading in whispers with the nearest Senator when someone else had the floor.

Kerr Oversells

At times, Kerr's informal manner and easy drawl gave the Senate the atmosphere of an Oklahoma town meeting. But of late, his presistency has got under senatorial skins. Kerr has made the mistake of overselling. Twice in one day Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas politely called him down for wandering away from his seat and sitting almost under the nose of the Senator who was speaking.

When Kerr kept this up the next day, Missouri's Senator Forrest Donnell broke in impatiently: "Mr. President, I make the point of order which was made twice on yesterday against the Senator from Oklahoma. Under the rules of the Senate, Senators are supposed to be at their seats when they speak."

As the debate wore on, Kerr challenged everyone who took the floor against him. He kept interrupting Missouri's Senator James Kem, for example, until the irritated Kem retorted:

"I shall answer the questions the Senator ptit to me in my own way, in my own words, in my own time and at such length as I see fit."

"If the Senator cares to indulge in personal remarks, that's all right," shrugged Kerr

"If the Senator wants to indulge in personalities, let the bars go down," snapped Kem.

They glowered at each other for a moment, then fell back to the polite, formal language of the Senate.

Charm Peddler

At another point, Kerr suggested that Senator Paul Douglas' arguments "would cause the junior Senator from Illinois to become a joint author of the bill."

"God deliver us from that!" cried Douglas.

"I am sure that He will—to our mutual gratification," bristled the Senator from Oklahoma," "I should like to be with the Lord, and I should like to be with the junior Senator from Oklahoma," smiled Douglas, "but not on this particular question."

Between spurts of fire, the debate was dull and technical. Kerr was assisted principally by Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas who also flitted from Senator to Senator, turning on the charm when arguments failed.

It will be interesting to see how much the charm of two freshmen Senators will cost the Nation's natural gas consumers.

Note—Since this column has been critical of Senator Kerr, it is only fair to report his criticism of me. Here it is: "And then there is good, old Drew Pearson—good, old Drew," said Kerr in the middle of his main speech. "No wonder American Broadcasting Co. puts Airwick on the air for 15 minutes after he gets through. Boy, oh boy, do they need it."
